DUNHAM SLIPS OUT OF JAIL

How He Did It Puzzles Authorities. Although There Are Several Ways Possible — Someone Outside Helped to Have Aided Him.

Harvey Dunham, who was being held in the Ulster county jail awaiting transfer to the Clinton State Prison at Dannemora, to which institution he was sentenced on November 14 by County Judge Joseph M. Fowles, escaped from the jail Wednesday afternoon. How he made good his escape remains unknown as no one saw him. Dunham was indicted by the grand jury for grand larceny in the first degree, it being charged that he stole an automobile at Stone Ridge and drove to Niagara Falls where he attempted to sell it. The police there were notified and made an investigation as to where the car came from and it was found that the car had been stolen. Dunham was arrested and brought back to Kingston. He at first entered a plea of not guilty but later through his attorney DuBois Gillette entered a plea of guilty to grand larceny in the second degree.

On account of his parents he was set off with a very light sentence. He was sentenced on November 14 to serve a term of not less than one year and six months or more than three years and six months in the Clinton State Prison at Dannemora.

Dunham was last seen in jail about 10 o'clock when one of the attendants was inside. Dunham was confined to the upper or third floor of the jail. Away from the rest of the prisoners during the day time the prisoners are allowed to go from the individual cells to the cell block which is unlocked by means of a double bolt. THREE DEFENDANTS IN GOLD'S SUIT

Benjamin Gold, the Saratoga football player who was injured on the Albany avenue bridge the latter part of October when the car in which he was riding struck a wooden covering, over some water pipes on the bridge, has also named the Ulster and Delaware railroad and the owners of the Saugerties bus line as defendants, in his action to recover $100,000 damages and injuries which he sustained and which he claims have disabled him for life. The action has been brought in the Saratoga County Supreme Court but attorneys for the defendants will introduce a motion in the near future to have the trial transferred to the Ulster County Supreme Court in view of the fact that the accident happened in this city.

MANY ATTENDED UNION SERVICE

Music Unusually Good This Thanksgiving—Dr. Cady Warns That World Progress and Peace are Possibly Only Through God.

The union Thanksgiving service at the High School on Thursday morning was one of the most satisfying and valuable ever held since the time of union Thanksgiving services in the city. The Rev. Arthur Cole pastor of the Albany Avenue Baptist Church, presided at the meeting which was opened with the singing of the hymn, "O Worship the King." This was followed by the reading of the president's proclamation by the Rev. Dr. Boove, pastor of the First Reformed Dutch Church. Then came the scripture reading written by the Rev. W. F. Stowe, the same being taken from the eleventh chapter of the book of Deuteronomy.

The entire musical part of the program was in charge of Harry P. Dodge, the Thanksgiving anthem being sung by the St. James M. E. Church choir. The Rev. George M. Cranston offered the Thanksgiving Day prayer after which the offertory was taken, the same being for the benefit of the Industrial Home of this city, now a time-honored custom.

During the taking of the offertory, C. Baldwin Allen sang "Thanksgiving," by Cowen, and sang it with a power and sincerity of feeling as well as beauty of musical presentation that made the song one of the outstanding features of the Thanksgiving service.

The Thanksgiving sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. Putnam Cady, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, and it was a most unusual and thought-provoking sermon. Recalling the past, Dr. Cady reminded his hearers that we no longer had that close sense of God that our forefathers, the founders of our country had, but Dr. Cady was not unwisely critical of that fact. He saw one reason for the fact in the vastly widened horizon of our lives and the world conditions today.

At the same time he found the fact deplorable. All things considered, Dr. Cady found profound reason for thanksgiving in God's patience with His children and the world.

Again, Dr. Cady warned his hearers of the fact that in the face of present day conditions following the late war, it was not God who had failed but man. As a very concrete illustration, the preacher called attention to the fact that we, here in enlightened, so-called progressive, and even cultured America, woke up when the war came to the fact that out of the flower of our young manhood called to arms, 36% could not write their names while 60% could not form or understand a simple military order. That but indicated what the mental, yes and the moral condition of our country really was at heart, and Dr. Cady found ground for the sincerest thanksgiving in the fact that we had been awakened to our condition in time, so that we could begin to remedy the same before this ignorance should spread further to our everlasting undoing.

Dr. Cady closed his sermon with the plea that we begin right now to meet God who is not far off, and with him become collaborators for the betterment of the world, being continually thankful for His sermon on the Mount. His peace which alone can bring peace to the world because it comes from close knowledge and love of the Prince of Peace.

The service closed with the singing of "My Country 'Tis of Thee," and the pronouncing of the benediction by the Rev. Dr. Grinton.

PROPHETER TRIED TO ASSAULT TWO

Ulster Park Man Let Off With Suspended Sentence For Attack On Woman At St. Remy—He And Lorenzo Alcoholicly Intoxicated.

Dick Prophet of Ulster Park was taken before Justice of the Peace Henry McKenzie at Port Ewen a few days ago by Corporal Ray Lounsbury of the State Troopers on a charge of assault in the third degree. After a hearing he was found guilty of the charge and the imposition of sentence was suspended.

Prophet in company with Lawrence Lorenzo was out in an automobile and had been sampling snuff, they arrived at St. Remy they overtook two women whom Prophet attempted to assault. It is alleged that Lorenzo was in no condition to assist and one of the women escaped and her screams attracted the attention of other persons who came to their assistance. A complaint was made to the State Troopers and Corporal Lounsbury took Prophet before Judge McKenzie at Port Ewen. The alleged assault took place a week ago on a Sunday evening.

Society Notes

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Freer left on a wedding trip to Niagara Falls and upon their return they will reside in Ulster Park.

Danvers Well Attended.

The daisant held Thanksgiving afternoon at the Knights of Columbus hall by the auxiliary of the Kingston City Hospital was very largely attended. Meagher, was married to Andrew McCauley, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Peter McCauley of New York city. The wedding was performed by the Rev. Joseph G. Cushman, and the attendants were Miss Katherine McGrane and Harry Howard. The bride looked charming in a brown velvet gown with hat to match and carried a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. Miss McGrane was gown in blue velvet and carried lavender colored chrysanthemums. The bride is a popular registered nurse. Class 1921, Benedictine Hospital. Sincerity.

Suppose that the yacht should look at the man-of-war, as she moved down the bay with all her canvas set, and say, "How can I get such sails upon me as that great and noble ship has upon her?" Every man would say, "A yacht must sail like a yacht, a sloop like a sloop, a schooner like a schooner, a brig like a brig, and a ship like a ship. Each vessel must make the voyage with its own hull and sails, and not copy those of any other."—Henry Ward Beecher.

THIRD OF ARMY STORES REMAIN

United States Is in Immense War-Stocks Business.

GET 15 PER CENT OF COST

Half-Billion Dollars' Worth of Goods Disposed of During Past Year for $83,000,000—More Than 100,000 Different Articles Sold for Cash Through a Nation-Wide Auction Sale System—Government Faces Many Restrictions.

One of the largest business enterprises conducted under one management in the United States during the last year has been the government's job of disposing of surplus war material. More than 100,000 different articles have been sold for cash through a nation-wide auction sale system. Sales have been in progress five days in every week all the year, and property that cost nearly $500,000,000 has been disposed of, the cash proceeds turned into the treasury aggregating approximately $83,000,000.

A summary obtained for the office of Assistant Secretary of War Walnwright, Uncle Sam's head salesman, shows that, on Sept. 1, 1921, there was available for sale about $750,000,000 in surplus war stocks, ranging in character and size from locomotives to pins and needles. One year later there remained on hand of that amount property worth $243,000,000, and officials today expressed the hope that Uncle Sam's shelves could be cleared in another six months.

The rate of return to the government varied tremendously. On one small lot of lumber it received 110 per cent of what it paid in war times; on a great mass of gas masks sold for salvage the return was one-half of 1 per cent of what they cost.

Satisfied With Return.

"The average recovery during the year for all classifications is about 15 per cent, which, under the circumstances, is considered very creditable," the summary said.

The government has faced restrictions never imposed on commercial transactions of the kind in the business world. For one thing, it had on hand vast quantities of munitions and other military stores of no value whatever except for war purposes. They could be sold only as scrap, to be broken up and reworked into articles of peaceful commerce. The return on such sales could have no relation to the cost value.

Another restriction was the necessity of disposing of those classes of commodities which are a part of peaceful industry in such fashion that private enterprise would not be crushed under the floods of materials to be sold.

riced out of government stocks. In some cases the government's stocks were sufficient to have met normal peace time consumption of a given commodity for a period of years.

Still another restriction was the necessity of making the war supplies available to all classes of American citizens, rich or poor. The sales were conducted so that the smallest retailer might have his chance, and the public auction system of small lots was followed for this reason.

First Call by Departments.

By direction of congress, the army surplus stocks of all classes were made available to other government departments and an aggregate amount was transferred of a cost value of $100,000,000.

Very few sales, it is stated, were made on other than a strict cash basis. As an illustration of the widespread nature of the selling operations, it is pointed out that, during the year in question, there were 120 large auction sales held in 51 different places in 27 states. Incidentally, this plan relieved the government of the necessity of transporting thousands of tons of commodities and adding the cost of transportation to the original cost.

BURGLAR KISSED CHILD

Told Diminutive Miss to Go Back to Sleep and Be Good Girl.

Marguerite Raizen, four years old, of Bergenfield, N. J., met a burglar in her little bedroom and rather liked him. At least so she told her parents when she came down stairs to find them excitedly discussing the ransacking of their home the night before.

"Mother," she said, "I wonder if it could be the man in my room. I woke up in the middle of the night and there was a nice, big man standing by my bed with a light in his hand. He smiled at me and said he was sorry he woke me and kissed me, and told me to go to sleep like a good little girl. So I did. He certainly acted like a gentleman, mother."

Prophet as Poker Player.

A translation reads, "Mesu, I pray thee, open the pot."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Mrs. Blanche I. Hawn-Rash-Brimmer-Tiernan is the "mail order" second wife of Professor John P. Tiernan, formerly law professor in Notre Dame University, South Bend, Ind., whom he married immediately after he had divorced his first wife. The first Mrs. Tiernan had accused Harry Poulin, a South Bend haberdasher, of being the father of her youngest child. He was acquitted. Immediately after the second marriage the court annulled the divorce decree, and Tiernan left wife No. 2 and returned to wife No. 1. The second Mrs. Tiernan returned to her low home and announced her intention of fighting for her "husband."

Tortoise Centuries Old.

That the giant tortoise lives to an immense age is an accepted fact. Experts have no hesitation in allowing them from 200 to 300 years of life—provided, of course, no accident occurs to hurry them out of existence. The living patriarch of the race today might have been a bright young egg when Raleigh was beheaded and the execution of Charles I. would be the contemporary history of his boyhood. His father would, perhaps, be a link with the discovery of America—only one life away as the giant tortoise counts life. The giant tortoise lives long, but he lives very, very slowly. When razing with thirst, he plunges his head into a pond to drink; it takes him six seconds to swallow a single mouthful.

Human Eye's Many Expressions.

All comprehend and acknowledge the power that speaks in the flaming eye, that inspires terror in the guilty and fresh courage in the virtuous; in the commanding eye that compels awe and prompt obedience; in the "look" that speaks volumes when the tongue fails to express the fast-throbbing thoughts and emotions. As a natural organ of language, the eye may express all the nobler emotions of the mind; so, also, may it be made the servant of baser uses. The look of coarse insolence, the leer so expressive of a brutal mind, the fascinating glance that hints more than the lips dare utter, are some of the forms of the lower language of which the eyes are susceptible.

MATTERS BEFORE THE SURROGATE

In surrogate's court the last will and testament of Pauline Kraus, late of the city of Kingston, had been filed with petition for probate and citations issued returnable December 18. The value of the estate is $4,000 real, $1,200 personal. Charles H. Buchholz and Lena Rackwick are named as executors. The beneficiaries are two daughters and a son. Frederick Stephan, Jr., is the attorney for the petitioners.

Letters of administration have been granted James H. Donovan in the estate of Timothy Donovan, deceased, late of the town of Lloyd. The value of the estate is $1,500 personal. H. A. Lent is the attorney for the petitioner.

There was a hearing before County Judge Joseph M. Fowler, as acting surrogate in the matter of the probate of the last will and testament of Richard T. Spellman, late of the town of Saugerties. Objections were filed by Joanna E. Spellman and Elizabeth Spellman, on the ground that will and codicils was not executed as the statute provides, that decedent was not of sound mind; did not comprehend the nature and import thereof, that it was not his free act; that it was procured under influence; that it was not his last will and testament, also that other objections will be made. Acting Surrogate Fowler sent the matter to the March term of the supreme court. Chris. J. Flanagan is attorney for the executor, William D. Brinnier & William D. Brinnier, Jr., for contestants, Frank W. Brooks for other interested parties.

PLACE OF BEAUTY

Lehman Cave in Nevada, Surprising Natural Wonder.

Has Recently Been Converted into a National Monument Through Presidential Proclamation.

The little town of Baker, Nev., nestled at the foot of the famous Snake range of mountains and in the very shadow of Mount Wheeler—of Jeff Davis peak, as it is more affectionately known locally—has suddenly become famous, through the dedication of Lehman cave as a national monument, by Presidential proclamation. Lehman cave is located barely three miles from this point, consequently Baker is reflected in the glory of the newly admitted national wonder.

The discovery of the great cave is credited to Hayes Cook, a pioneer prospector who followed the golden lure of the desert in the early days, when the great western deserts called the young manhood of the land to seek for the elusive treasure. However, to "Ab" Lehman, for whom it is named, is given full measure of credit for the development of the cave and for its acceptance as a national monument. Mr. Lehman spent more than ten years opening up a good passageway and constructing ladders for the accommodation of visitors. C. C. Boak of Tonopah took up the work after Mr. Lehman and is personally responsible for the governmental action.

The dedication was made a most elaborate affair and hundreds of people attended from the entire state and across the line in Utah. The governor of the state was represented as also was the federal government. The event was a gala day with a reading of the presidential proclamation, a musical program and the customary firing of a salute as Old Glory was raised to a peak adjoining the mouth of the cavern.

This town, located on the Grand Central highway, entertains a constant stream of visitors, and it is anticipated that more than ever will take advantage of the slight side-trip to Lehman cave.

Lehman cave is reputed to be one of the finest and also one of the largest in the country. It is a veritable natural wonderland. The mammoth cave is beneath an old volcanic crater, but bears no resemblance to the former fiery pit. In fact, the reverse is found in Lehman cave. Here ice and snow hold sway. Stalactites and stalagmites are the chief attractions. They reach up and down in massive columns of ice, eventually touching in mid-cave and forming mammoth pillars and other queer and fantastic shapes.

In spots the ceiling of the cave appears a mile removed and the stalactites, dotting the roof like stars in the heavens, appear uncountable. Again the formation is so low it is necessary to negotiate considerable distances on the hands and knees. One such spot is of considerable length and has been named "Fat Man's Misery."

A unique feature is an ordinary sized bathtub—of ice—always filled with clear cold water. There are an endless number of wonders contained in this beautiful palace of ice. To mention a few: The Parachutes, Fairy rose hush, Eden's bower, Queen Victoria's slide saddle, Giant's sword, Cave Min's den, Pink room, Angel's wing, Madonna and Child, Navajo blanket, Niagara falls in winter, Washington's tomb and Grant's tomb. Each of these names has been applied, together with myriad others, through some particular resemblance, since usually the resemblance is most pronounced.

Almost midway through the maze of "growing ice" is Lake Como, a placid pool of crystal waters filtered through 300 feet of lime formation, so pure as to be tasteless.

Lehman cave truly is another of the wonder spots with which the United States abounds—Letter to Christian Science Monitor World's "Movie" Houses.

In number of moving picture theaters, the United States heads the list with 18,000, in round figures. Germany comes next with 8,750; Russia, third, with 3,500, and Great Britain, fourth, with 3,000. The total for Europe is 18,300, distributed as follows: France, 2,400; Italy, 2,200; Austria, 900; Belgium, 775; Scandinavia, 703; Poland, 300; Holland, 227; Hungary, 180; Spain, 156; Czechoslovakia, 123; Switzerland, 123; Yugoslavia, 117; Turkey, 32, and the Balkans, 23. The continent of America has 20,450 "movies," those not in the United States being distributed as follows: South America, 1,200; Canada, 700, and Central America, 500. Africa, Asia and Australia among them have 1,361, and the grand total for the world is 47,000.

Radium and Plants.

It has been found by experiments with the action of radium on growing seeds that the rays act as a stimulus, varying in intensity with their strength, as well as with the thickness of the seed coats, and the amount of intervening moist soil. If the stimulus is not pushed beyond a certain limit, germination and subsequent growth are accelerated. Above that limit the results are unfavorable. The growth of plants is retarded, and may be stopped, by placing them in an atmosphere containing the emanation of radium, such as may be drawn from a cylinder lined with Lieber's coating.

the route described follows that of the

The guide book, which may be ob-the rocks and precious minerals, degists. The history of the mining industry is passed along the route forms of the most fascinating and adventurous chapters in the country's history. The most interesting of gold camps described is possibly the one where great wealth in lead, gold and silver was produced.

The chances that the wizard water much blood was shed, many thou-

1,182 TRILLION RUBLES
The Finance Commissioner Gave
Official Figure of Paper Issue.
Millions and millions mean little when reckoning the affairs of Russia's soviet government, according to Finance Commissioner Sokolov. In a report to the Working and Peasants' parliament he announced that the soviet rubles in circulation amounted to 1,182 trillion.
Nevertheless, M. Sokolov said that the situation showed indications of inflation. Tax collections and increased revenues from the railroads other government institutions were needed to balance the paper issue, which has been averaging more than 100 million rubles monthly, he explained.

Finance commissioner recommended further reductions in the budget, declaring that the maintenance of 20,000 troops was costing a third of the state's budget. The treasury was unable to stand such a constraint much longer, he added.
Sokolov urged a curtailment of expenses in every possible way, saying that the government must stop industries and increase taxation to cover the growing expenditures.
He declared that the government feared a shortage of gold rubles, which is covered by a new issue of

A SHOPPING PLACE FOR THRIFTY PEOPLE

Our Island Paradise

Fishermen at Kealahou Bay.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Hawaii, territory of the United States, and most important strategically of the lands of the Pacific, is not alone interesting because of its military and naval value to Uncle Sam, emphasized some months ago by the deliberations at Washington in regard to the world's greatest ocean. It is in many ways literally an island paradise.

Scarcely anywhere else in the world may one roam through tropical jungles with never a thought of poisonous insects or snakes. Such creatures do not exist in these fair islands. Even poison ivy and similar noxious plants are unknown. And though in the edge of the tropics, Hawaii has a cooler temperature by ten degrees than any other land in the same latitudes. Moreover, one may enjoy its climate at will by a journey of a few miles; for the northern half of each island, swept by the trade winds, is rainy and heavily wooded, while just over the mountain ridge is a drier, warmer region.

In a way, the United States may well thank Boston and its daring traders and misadventurers of the early days for the fact that Hawaii now flies the Stars and Stripes rather than the tri-color or the British union Jack. A Spanish navigator first discovered the islands in 1555, but his country laid no claim to them, and they were practically forgotten. The British Captain Cook visited the Hawaiian group in 1778, and named them the Sandwich Islands. Still the islands were practically unknown. Then, following the close of the American Revolution, American ships began to sail the seven seas in growing numbers, and in 1791 the first ship flying the Stars and Stripes—from Boston—visited the Hawaiians. It was the first of many from the same port, carrying traders, whalers and adventurers; and soon the natives had learned of the republic on the continent to the east, and came to consider the "United States" and "Boston" synonymous.

The Boston traders found each of the islands under a separate king, with two rival rulers on Hawaii, the largest of the islands. One of the latter obtained treasure and ammunition from the traders and got their assistance in building a "navy." With this American help he became the "Napoleon of the Pacific," conquering the other islands, and, as Kamehameha I, ruled over the consolidated kingdom.

Hawaiian Trade Was Valuable.
The Americans found the Hawaiian trade a good thing. They sold the king and his nobles everything from clothes and jewelry to billiard tables and steam yachts, and in return carried away shiploads of valuable sandalwood. Strong liquor was not forgotten among the imports, and in Honolulu among the naturally light-hearted natives the American sailors contributed to the creation of a gay Pacific resort, a sort of forerunner of San Francisco's Barbary Coast of later decades. Deserters from American ships, in the delightful haven of a barbarous paradise, helped to brighten the fame or the infamy of the Honolulu of those days. The situation became such that in 1820 President Monroe sent an agent to reside in Honolulu and look after American interests in regard to commerce and seamen.

A shipload of missionaries, also from Boston, arrived in the islands in 1820, much to the disgust of the traders as well as those who had deserted the sea to tread Hawaii's primrose path. The complaint of the traders was that the missionaries taught the natives "the value of things," and so made trading unprofitable. American ways and teachings at their best made a great impression on the more thoughtful Hawaiians, and when they reshaped their government they made the Ten Commandments the basis of their laws.

More and more Americans visited and settled in the islands and the Hawaiians looked upon America as their best friend among the nations. When pioneers from the United States were pushing west toward California just before the Mexican war, which added that state to the Union, a British naval commander in the Pacific, realizing the strategic importance of the Hawaiian group, seized the islands, but his country promptly disavowed his act. After some difficulties with France over the islands in the forties, the United States declared a sort of Monroe Doctrine toward them. As early as 1851 the island government, fearing trouble with other nations, provisionally ceded the islands to the United States. But the cession was not accepted, and numerous efforts to become a part of the United States were made in the following half century.

Annexed by Uncle Sam.

In 1857 the United States obtained a concession for the use of Pearl harbor for a coaling station. When Queen Liliuokalani attempted to abolish the constitution in 1893, the constitutional party, led by American settlers, brought about a revolution and deposed her. One of the first acts of the provisional government was to apply for annexation to the United States. Germany was seizing islands right and left in the Pacific, and the Hawaiians wished to get under a sheltering wing. Politics in the United States delayed action, and in the meantime the Republic of Hawaii was organized. Then in 1898, during the Spanish-American war, congress suddenly voted to annex Hawaii to the United States.

Though the Hawaiian islands are known as "the half-way house of the Pacific," in reality the distance from San Francisco to Honolulu is only about half that from Honolulu to Australia, the Philippines or Japan. All the islands are of volcanic origin, but coral has grown on the shores of many of them. The disintegrated lava has formed a rich soil which responds liberally to irrigation. Only Cuba and Java produce greater total crops of sugar, and the per acre yield of Hawaii is the greatest in the world—four tons without irrigation and six tons with it. The sugar crop for the year ended June 30, 1920, was worth $75,500,000. The pineapple crop, second in importance, was valued at $13,500,000.

Mauna Loa Volcano.

Perhaps the Hawaiian group is best known to most people because of the huge volcano Mauna Loa on the island of Hawaii. In September, 1919, this great safety-valve "blew off steam," giving a most unusual demonstration of nature's forces. From a huge vent in the mountain's side, a flood of molten lava was belched forth. Spreading out into a great shallow stream, it came roaring down the mountain slope, burning forests, carrying huge trees and immense boulders on its surface—sweeping everything before it. With a speed varying from 1 to 20 miles an hour, according to the country it was passing over, it broadened out until it was nearly a mile in width. After wiping out the government belt road, razing telephone poles and destroying a vast amount of property, the red-hot lava tumbled over a high precipice and plunged hissing into the sea nearly 20 miles from its source.

In approaching the flow from the sea in the early evening, the glow from the lava was visible for many miles. As one drifted within 200 yards of the point where the liquid rock was rushing into the sea, the scene was awe-inspiring. Slowly the smoky haze from the burning forests, which hung over the source 20 miles away, lifted and the river of fire stood out in its full glory. Leaping from palm to valley, rushing uphill and roaring down, the fiery flood thundered down the mountain slope, carrying on its bosom rocks as big as houses.

As the stream of blazing lava neared the coastline, it appeared to gather more speed, taking the final plunge over a 100-foot cliff at a terrific rate, and looking for all the world like a fiery Niagara. As the red-hot lava came in contact with the water, great columns of steam and gas, like huge water-spouts, were forced hundreds of feet into the air. Huge boulders, hurled into space, exploded with thunderous reports into auras of red and green lights, while flashes of what looked like lightning added to the chaos.

John Meets an Old Friend

By CAROLINE M. WILSON

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

"Bob and I are going on the yacht club cruise, Halliwell; better come with us," remarked John Murray, to his friend, pushing back his chair and lighting a cigarette.

Halliwell threw his cards into the center of the table.

"No, thank you, Murray. I must get back to the office. Your eternal good times would be the death of me. Have to think of the wife, you know. I'll take my pleasure at the other end of life."

"Eternal good times!" thought Murray, as he walked down the street alone. "I haven't had many good times lately. Business is rotten. And Laura is cold as ice, although I could have staked my life that Laura would have stuck if I had earned only a day laborer's pay. Well, perhaps I had better give up the cruise and go back to the office. There are several important letters that ought to go out on the next mail." Halliwell's remark still rankled.

He was walking down the avenue when, one block away from his office, he met his wife's old school friend, Coralie Winter.

"Why, how do you do, John," she exclaimed, holding out her hand. "Had lunch yet?" and without giving him time to answer, added, "I am 'most famished."

John hesitated the fraction of a moment, then gave up all thoughts of office work.

"Where shall we lunch today?" she asked, coolly, letting a casual passer-by gather the impression that they had been in the habit of meeting. John colored and looked at the man just as he, by some mental telepathy, turned and looked John over from head to foot.

"I don't care," exclaimed he, morosely. "Anywhere you please."

"A corner of the English ten room would suit me all right. I think a good lobster Newburg would please me down to the ground."

Murray groaned inwardly, and tried to visualize the state of his pocket-book. They found a secluded corner at the far end of the room, where John soon recovered his usual good spirits. He was laughing heartily at some witicism of Coralie when she happened to remark: "Oh, I'd love to go as far as the yacht club with you."

"Would you? Well, he's a good sport and come with me. There'll be plenty of room. I'm going to motor down with my luggage this afternoon, and let the chauffeur bring back the machine. Dare you? You'll have an awfully good time."

"Take your dare, I'm going to telephone and then I'll be with you in a jiffy."

Murray tipped the waiter with the last change he had in his pocket, and rose to follow after Coralie. Just as he leaned to pick up his fallen handkerchief, he was stunned to hear his wife talking to a woman friend behind him.

"Well, what of it?" asked John of himself, bristling in self defense. "Coralie is an old friend of Laura's."

Just the same he couldn't help remembering that his wife had asked for the use of the automobile that afternoon to go shopping. Also, that she had not been at all well lately.

"I've half a notion to turn back and get her to go with us. But she thinks I'm busy at the office, and goodness knows I ought to be. No, it's better not to speak, but I wish I had not met Coralie."

He hurriedly left the room and hunted up a telephone booth. He took out his watch.

"Three o'clock. By George! There's that note to Mears & Bornght. Gosh to protest! I meant to go to the bank this afternoon. Hang it all! If I hadn't met Coralie it would all have been attended to. Come to think of it, though, I haven't got the $500 in the safe. Well, a short life and a merry one for me," he laughed. Then he joined Coralie on the sidewalk just as his chauffeur rounded the corner. He dismissed the man for the day.

Wearing his way through the crowded traffic took all his mind, so that he had little time to think of his business.

"Push me to drive," suddenly begged Coralie.

Murray was dismayed. He disliked anyone but his chauffeur to touch the wheel.

"Well, we'll have to get on a long stretch of road, no city streets for a while," and he turned onto the country road.

"It's a wonderful day, John, too nice to spend in a poky office. I believe in taking a good time as one goes along. I was to meet a friend at three and buy some appropriate music for the church, but I should worry!" She laughed, lightly. John remembered that the keeping of an appointment was a life and death matter with his wife.

"Thank the heavens Coralie is not my wife," he thought. "Still, if the little mix is fond of me how can I snub her?" he reasoned.

As Coralie laughed she put one hand on his arm familiarly, turned, and smiled up into his face.

Hours afterward when Murray came to himself he found himself in a hospital cot.

"The woman?" he inquired of the nurse, anxiously.

"Don't worry. You ran into nobody. Of course, your nerves are terribly shaken, but it might have been worse."

"Can it be possible that Coralie was snubbed?" he thought. "If so, can she be so heartless as to utterly desert me?" His tired brain could not solve the problem.

For days he lay there looking secretly at the door for Coralie. Her silence piqued him. Then one afternoon his friend, Harold Grinnell, came to sit with him.

"Wish me good luck, John. I am engaged to Coralie Winter."

A long pause, then Murray murmured faintly, "Since when?"

"Oh, for the last six months. Coralie wanted to keep it secret."

Another long pause, during which Grinnell considered calling the nurse.

"I hope to be carried home in the ambulance tomorrow," John said, to break the silence.

"Tomorrow? Why, I don't understand it. You certainly are not going home to an empty house? You must know that your wife went back to her father's last week!"

"So she did, to make a little visit. Well, my poor head troubles me yet," and Murray closed his eyes. Grinnell, thinking him asleep, stole out of the room.

"I do not blame the little girl. She is tired of the whole mess. Of course, she won't come back. I've done some thinking while I was away here. Halliwell was right."

Murray closed his eyes again, wearily. "Wish I were dead," he thought. "But before I go I'd like to confess to the little girl. I don't blame her for being cold. I have been a skunk. She's told her father everything, of course. Small patience the old man will have with such a story as she could tell him."

Unconsciously he spoke aloud. He lay there with eyes closed, and the nurse, peeping in at the door, reported to the interne: "Sleeping comfortably."

Murray smiled, bitterly. "Shall I ever sleep again?" he thought. "This dull ache is more exquisite agony than any physical suffering caused by the accident. I'll have to give Laura up, of course. Her father isn't the man to give me a second trial."

A soft arm stole across his chest, and a long kiss warmed his lips. John hardly breathed for fear the joy would fade into a dream.

"John, do you know me?"

"My wife! But I want to confess. Coralie!"

"Never mind," she soothed. "I've known about Coralie all along, but surely we are not going to let a silly doll come between us, after all these years?"

"The only heaven that is given away," murmured John, closing his eyes in his first peaceful sleep, while Laura knelt beside him.

New One to Her.

Fastidious grammarians driven out of colleges and publishing offices appear to be taking refuge in the courts. Recently an actress was brought before a city magistrate for recklessly speeding in her automobile, and was asked by him what she was trying to do. She confessed with a smile: "I was just trying to seriously split the air." The judicial retort was: "Well, if you did it as well as you split the infinitive, I think it is no more than fair for you to split a $100 bill and leave it with the court." The somewhat amazed lady paid her fine, but confessed to her friends that she would not know what an infinitive was if one leaped into her car.

Filling Cracks in Furniture.

Unhappily cracks in furniture may be filled in with beeswax. First soften the wax until it is of the consistency of putty, then press it firmly and smoothly into the cracks with a thin steel knife. Sandpaper over the surrounding wood and work the dust into the beeswax. This gives a wood finish of color, and when the furniture is varnished the cracks will have disappeared.

Beeswax is better than putty, for putty soon dries, crumbles and falls out, while the wax will remain for an indefinite length of time without change.

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

HONORED FOR RESCUE

Scout Samuel Levine of Brooklyn, N. Y., the hero of the following rescue, was honored for his bravery, when, during the recent Safety Week celebration, the boy was decorated by the commissioner of police of New York city with an especially designed medal, the gift of Judge Elbert H. Gary.

Scout Levine and several other scouts were returning from a hike to Glover lake, Staten Island, when they noticed another party of boys walking out upon the thin ice covering the water. Levine called a warning to the boys, but they ventured out until the ice cracked beneath them. Two of the boys fell into the water, and the others ran to the shore. Without a moment's hesitation, Levine threw off his hat, coat and canteen and plunged into the ice near a boat which was frozen there.

breaking the ice about the craft with his hands. He made a way for himself in the water dragging the boat with him. He soon reached the boy who was in the greater danger, helped him into the boat, next he went to the other one and then helped them both to the shore.

HIS PRESCRIPTION

When a bit of sunshine hits ye,
After passing of a cloud,
When a fit of laughter gits ye,
And your spins is feelin' proud,
Don't forget to up and sing it
At a soul that's feelin' blue,
For the minst that ye sing it,
It's a boomerang to you.

"That poem and the eighth scout law, 'A scout is cheerful, smiles whenever he can,' are my dope," says a home scout of Manhattan. "When the old dog begins to hurt and I can't get out with the fellows, I say my dope two or three times, and it always helps a lot."

SCOUTS GUARDIANS OF TREES

Scouts of Troop 21, Grand Rapids, Mich., are the official guardians of some trees, which have been planted in memory of soldier dead of the city. It is the duty of the scouts to see that the trees are kept in healthy condition and every Arbor day they conduct a ceremony in memory of the veterans to whom the trees are dedicated.

RESCUES ASPHYXIATED NEGRO

Fourteen-year-old Charles A. Kohn of Troop No. 5, Montgomery, Ala., while riding in an automobile, noticed a crowd watching the unavailing efforts of workmen to revive an asphyxiated negro. The boy ran to the scene. Quickly and efficiently he pushed back the crowd and then applied first aid to the unconscious man, who soon began to show signs of life, and in a few minutes was able to sit up. He had been given up as dead by his fellow-workers.

POULTRY

ROUP IS DANGEROUS DISEASE

Delicate Fowls Have Very Severe Attacks and Recover Slowly—Isolate Sick Birds.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the worst results of the wet and inclement weather of fall and early winter is the disease of chickens commonly called roup. It resembles the more malignant forms of influenza in larger animals and in man, attacking principally the membranes lining the eye, the sacks below the eye, the nostrils, the larynx and the trachea. It is attended with high fever and is very contagious, but the nature of the germ is not yet known. However, it is known that contagion is brought into the poultry yard by infected birds. Outbreaks of roup in the fall occur most commonly where the growing chickens are overcrowded in the coop or where the coops are not waterproof or are poorly ventilated. Sometimes these are birds purchased from other flocks, and sometimes they are birds from the home flock which have been on exhibition and exposed to contagion. Again, they are wild birds or pigeons which fly from one poultry yard to another.

Delicate birds have very severe attacks and recover slowly, as pointed out in Farmer's Bulletin 957, published by the United States Department of Agriculture. Often a chronic condition persists for a long time and birds so affected give and spread the disease for a year or more, becoming a starting point for many new outbreaks.

At first symptoms are similar to an ordinary cold, but there is more fever, dullness and prostration. The eyelids are swollen and held closed most of the time. The birds sneeze and shake their heads in their efforts to free the air passages. Sometimes the eyes are entirely closed and birds are prevented from finding food. This, of course, results in rapid loss of strength, and many of the birds die within a week.

Comfortable, Roomy Winter Lodgings for the Hens Means Plenty of Eggs.

or ten days. Some of the affected ones recover and others continue weak and have a chronic form of disease for months.

The best treatment is to place sick birds in a warm, dry, well-ventilated room free from drafts, and away from the rest of the flock. An antiseptic and healing mixture should be applied to the affected membranes. Lacking a spraying apparatus, a small syringe and oil can, or even a medicine dropper, may answer the purpose, or the bird's head may be plunged into a basin of the mixture and held there for a few seconds. The most suitable remedies are: Equal parts of hydrogen peroxide and water; boric acid, 1 ounce, water, 1 quart; or permanganate of potash, 1 dram, water 1 pint.

WINTER SHELTER FOR GEESSE

Shed Open on South Side With Plenty of Straw or Shavings is Most Satisfactory.

Except in stormy weather or in the winter mature geese seldom need a house. A shed open on the south side, a poultry house, or a barn usually is provided by breeders in the North, and is used by some breeders in the South, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Coops, barrels, or some other dry shelter should be provided for the young goslings. But wherever they are the geese should have a clean place, with plenty of straw or shavings for the floor during the winter.

KEEP POULTRY FROM CATTLE

Unless Herd Has Been Found Free From Tuberculosis Fowls Should Be Separated.

Poultry kept on dairy or general live stock farms should not be allowed to run with cattle unless the herd has been tested and found free from tuberculosis. Poultrykeepers are beginning to realize that if they are to buy healthy birds they must get them from places where the live stock is known to be free from tuberculosis.

A GOWN WITH TIGHT SLEEVES

Oriental in its closely woven draperies and vivid colors is an ideal gown of brocaded batik, long purple tassels and tight sleeves add to interest in this outfit.

YARDS OF RIBBON ON GOWN

Flashy Strands Run Gamut of Rainbow to Supply the New Edicts of Dress.

You will find yards upon yards of ribbons on the modern dress-up. Somehow the formality of the designs seem to demand that thing and formally plaited style of trimming which only the de luxe can supply.

But before you can realize charming these ribbon trimmings, you must see the new ones as have been woven. They come in the brightest colors of the rainbow. They embody all of the newer handwoven threads and weaves. They are made in stripes and plaids stars and in Paisley patterns that tonish the eye.

In very many cases, in fact, they are used as edges of trimmings by reason of their contrast with basic material of the frock form decorative note which cannot be omitted and which proves to be entirely simple way the so-called ling of the gown.

Black and white or black and ribbons are particularly lovely as highly colored backgrounds of tinsel. For instance, there was a silver ribbon no wider than inch and a half used as an edging house gown of jade green satin. edge decoration gave all the de effect and it was about as simple as could be imagined. It was only to hold down the hem and at same time it made a trimming would be hard to undo.

You cannot go wrong if you buy ribbons for the trimmings your newer dress gowns. They are wide or narrow, soft or stiff, but can always find a place in the formal styles which are now being introduced.

FLEXIBLE CORSET IN FASHION

Old "Straight Jacket" is Banished Forever; New Style Liked by Stout Women.

Corsets continue to be the veritable backbone of good costume for all except the unusually slender, the trimly graceful, the very young, the professional gymnasts and women. The season's showing in setry, however, sets forth garments far removed from the corsets of five years ago as the automobile from a pushcart. The stiff iron cages that were own sisters to strait jackets, are gone forever.

Even the stoutest women are offered garments of flexibility, ease, suppleness, with which to confine too enthusiastic curves. American women find that some support for abdominal and back muscles is a necessity in their strenuous lives. Foreign firms are importing American models to copy. Straight lines, in fact, fronts or with back lacing of almost gossamer weight, of Damascus steel strength, much elastic webbing, beautiful brocades of rare laces and rich embroideries and ribbons are found in a mode of corsetry, from the brass with attached hip reducer to the dancing girdle, with pendant girdle.

Hats Are Large

A great many of the large hats trimmed in laces, laid over the brim in drapes, or hung off the brim in curtains. There are combinations of black and white, the seen felt for a crown with a brim of black velvet and a drape black lace laid over the brim falling in a streamer. Gold velvet brown lace trimming is another neat item. Even the crushed felt is shown in brown for a large shape with a soft edge and a gold ribbon band about the crown with a loop off the side.

New Cape Fabrics

A new fabric admirably adapted for capes and wraps has a dapper face on one side, while the other is shown in brown for a large shape with a soft edge and a gold ribbon band about the crown with a loop off the side.

KELLY WINS IN APPELLATE DIV.

The appellate division of the supreme court, a few days ago, in the matter of Hubert Kelly, plaintiff-re-spondent, against the Utica Fire Insurance Company, of Oneida county, N. Y., defendant-appellant, has decided in favor of Mr. Kelly. This was one of several cases that were on the Ulster county supreme court calendar for a long period, and was the first one "tried." Judgment having been given by a jury after trial before Justice G. D. B. Haebrouck, in plaintiff's favor, and judgment entered in Ulster county clerk's office, January 11, 1922, in favor of plaintiff in $596.50 and $201.41 costs, amounting in all to $797.91. From this judgment the Utica Fire Insurance Co. appealed. The appellate division, the Hon. Henry T. Kellogg, acting presiding justice, Justice G. D. B. Haebrouck not sitting, in the memorandum handed states that it is "ordered, that the said judgment so appealed from be and the same hereby is, in all things unanimously affirmed with costs."

In the March term of supreme court, held at the court house, Justice Rosch presiding, several other of the Kelly insurance cases were tried together and plaintiff was given judgment in each. Mills & Mills are attorneys for the defendant-appellant and John R. DeVany of Ellenville, attorney for Hubert Kelly, plaintiff-re-spondent.

Twain's Story Came Late.

A Mark Twain story recorded by Chauncey Depew in his "Memories of Eighty Years" relates an incident at a dinner party at Homburg. There was a dead silence whenever there was the slightest sign that the great humorist was going to make a remark, but to the company's disappointment he did not commit himself. The following evening the same company was again assembled and at last Mark told a story. There was a great laughter, the fun being over the fact that Depew had told the same story to the same company the night before.

The "Reformation."

"The Reformation" is the name given to the great religious revolution of the Sixteenth century, which resulted in the establishment of Protestantism throughout a great part of western Christendom. Although the Reformation originated during the Renaissance, it did not assume definite shape until 1517. The Reformation achieved its greatest success in Germany, Switzerland, Holland, Denmark, Sweden, Scotland and England. In Spain and Italy it was crushed by the Inquisition; in France it gave rise to the Huguenot wars; while in Bohemia and parts of Germany its development was greatly retarded by the Thirty Years' war.

Seemed to Resent Jap Flag.

Oceanic islands have a way of popping up and down now and then. Not many years ago a brand new one made its appearance near the volcano group in the Pacific, amid a tumult of the sea and great clouds of ashes and steam. When the disturbance had subsided it proved to be nearly three miles in circumference, and the highest part of it was 480 feet above the waves. The Japanese landed on it when it was cool enough, raised their flag upon it, and called it Nii Shima. Whereupon it proceeded to melt like sugar in a teacup, and at last accounts it was only a few feet above sea level.

Animals Unfit for Human Food.
Pythagoras taught the doctrine of the transmigration of the soul, but that it never entered into those animals which it was lawful to eat. Hence those animals into which the human soul entered were unclean or unfit for human food. This notion existed long before the time of Pythagoras, who learned it in Egypt. In the Old Testament, those animals which both chew the cud and part the hoof were clean, and might be eaten. Birds of prey were accounted unclean. Fish with fins and scales were accounted fit food for man.

Art of Penmanship Waning.
Sometimes one wonders what has become of the beautiful but old style of writing. The penmanship of the present day does not, as a rule, compare with the beautiful specimens that were formerly displayed in the copy books that were part of one's education a few decades ago. A well known penman the other day, in commenting upon this, as he phrased it, retrogression, said: "The average individual no longer writes his name, he simply draws it."

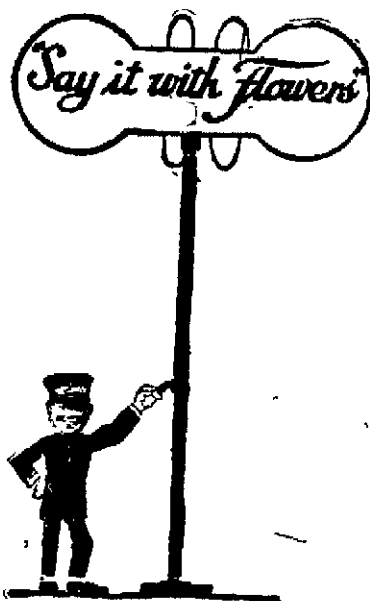

First Aid Treatment.
If something gets stuck in the throat try first a sharp blow between the two shoulder blades, next drinking water or some hot drink to relax the throat muscles, then eat a piece of bread. If these fail, give an emetic to induce vomiting. Lemon juice will dissolve a small fish bone. A simple emetic consists of either one teaspoonful of mustard or salt in a cupful of water. This may be beneficially used when a headache is caused by acute indigestion.

Canadian French.
There is a difference between Parisian and Canadian French, easily understood when it is remembered how many years have gone by since Canada received any immigration from France. But it would not be exactly correct to say that the French spoken in Canada is faulty and incorrect. The English of two hundred years ago would sound very curious in our ears. The French taught in schools and colleges is as near to that used in France as possible.

VIVID PICTURES OF TURK ATROCITIES

Eyewitness Tells of the Calamity at Smyrna.

MASSACRE SCENE DESCRIBED

Archbishop Slain After His Beard Had Been Extracted Hair by Hair—Church No Protection for Women Who Fled There Hoping to Find Haven of Refuge—Millions of People Forced into Streets by Fire—Pillaged Day and Night.

An eyewitness of the recent Smyrna catastrophe has written the following letter to his sister, who is a member of the staff of the International Institute for Foreign-Born Women, an active branch of the Young Women's Christian association. The writer is now destitute in Piræus, to which place he escaped with his children after outwitting and circumventing the Turkish guard.

"From the very first day of the Turkish offensive at Adon Kara-hissar I had a remote idea that the Greeks would not be able to keep the lines of the front unbroken. Nevertheless, I never imagined that my terrible forebodings would be realized so soon. Only five days passed and the Turks, unrestrained and not finding the least obstacle in their way, descended on the city of Smyrna. No one expected it as the official announcements of the Greek army of Asia Minor issued false reports to quiet the population. Only the wounded who daily were carried from the front told of our hopeless condition there.

"What happened at the city of Smyrna no human mind can conceive. From the very first days of the offensive the refugees started rushing to the city of Smyrna, fleeing in terror before the sword of the barbarous and fanatical executioners. Women half naked, refugees, children and old men running terror-stricken through the streets.

Forerunner of Calamity.

"I, influenced by this panic-stricken exodus, decided to send my wife and children to Greece on a boat that was going to take the employees of the Bank of Athens from Smyrna. I thought best to leave my most valuable things in the house of my mother-in-law for safety. I left my home carrying a few necessary things. Alas! my beautiful dear home! It was decreed that I should not see it any more. We go on to Kria Vrisi when turning to Basmahan. (The Turkish quarter) I see it all red with fires. The light was an ominous one and I knew it was the forerunner of calamity. We walk to the Horko Han to reach the quay, when I hear the loud whistles of the boats which were at the port whistling in honor of the entrance of the Turk into the city of Smyrna. At the Maltese quarter I see two Turks running with bare swords. (Korkma! don't be afraid!) they tell us. The occupation took place at eleven in the morning and I found myself with my wife and babies in the very midst of it. We ran to the Bank of Athens, which was under French protection, where we stay under the windows of the bank is the great Berivolo (note: a walled square with the church in the center) of the Metropole, Agia Photini, where were sheltered nearly three thousand refugees from the different parts of the interior.

"It is about 2.40 p. m. when from the window of the bank I see three Turks on horseback with naked swords shouting 'Korkma! it's you! (don't be afraid, it is not long) In the meantime one of the newspapers issued a proclamation of Kemal by which he threatened with penalty of death any one who would touch the Christians. It was the first time spread out for the poor Christians. Armed with a copy of the proclamation I went going out to see what has become of father I find him well and at 4.30 I turn to go back to the bank. On the way I notice a suspicious movement of groups of Turks armed to the teeth. Passing through Magnies Tavernes I see that the Turkish soldiers have blockaded the whole quarter, breaking and looting the shops. They notice me and rush for me. I take refuge in 'Santa Maria' (Italian cathedral).

City Like a Desert.

"The city is like a desert. All the shops are closed. In the meantime many families, barefooted women bleeding, with hair blowing in the wind, rush in and beg the protection of Santa Maria. The work of pillage, massacre and outrage had started—oh, terror, agony, desperation! Not one man was left in Al Konstantino Mortakia and Agia Paraskevi (three Greek quarters). Groups of Turks, yelling, start from Basmahan to Al Konstantino and the Armenian quarter where they start the terrible work of massacre. The bodies of the Christians are piled in the streets by hundreds. Not one Armenian was left; not one. The Armenian was killed only because he was an Armenian, and was killed by the civilized Turks who undertook to keep order in the city in absence of the regular army. I was shut up in the Italian church. I beg an Italian friend to accompany me to the Bank of Athens. He refuses. I am a Greek you see, and there is no mercy for the Greeks. In the evening a group of French soldiers pass on the way to guard the different French institutions. I follow it and I reach the bank, where my family was in great anxiety, thinking I had been killed. There we had moments of agony, terror and desperation. At the entrance of Agia Photini were placed Turkish guards, not letting anyone come out. In the same day our archbishop is arrested and killed in the most barbarous way after they had pulled out one by one the hairs of his beard. The shots are as many as if it were a time of great battle.

Pillaged Day and Night.

"The shops under the bank are broken and pillaged day and night. You must know, sister, that the martial law was proclaimed, but that was only for the Christians, you understand. The Turks were left unmolested in their terrible work of massacre and pillage.

"I remained in the bank four days. What I saw at this time was terrible, inconceivable. I saw Turkish civilians barefooted, killing Armenians and Greeks only because they did not stop at their first order. From the first night moments of agony and terror were heard from the Perivolo of Agia Photini that was under the bank's windows. It was the screams of the poor refugees whose husbands had been taken away to massacre. The Turks entered the Perivolo at night and after robbing the wretched women of their scant belongings satisfied their animal and barbarous instincts on them. Those four days were like twenty years to me and they were forty mortal wounds to my heart. Four whole days the poor Greek refugees did not taste food. The Turkish soldiers sold them 25 drams of bread for half a lire.

"On the fourth day I decided to take my family to a safer shelter. As I am connected with the Standard Commercial Trading corporation, I decided to take shelter in its warehouse. On the 16th of September I leave the bank as the Turkish guard would not let me stay any more, and I was afraid that it was going to be discovered that I served in the Greek army. On the same day great flames covered the horizon. It was September 13, 3.30 p. m. In the Perivolo of the Armenian church were gathered about 2,500 men, women and children. Armed Turks surrounded the whole block and fire was started from the four corners of the church. Moans and screams of terror were heard for miles and the smell of burning human flesh filled the atmosphere. The fire spread through all the Armenian quarter; at the same time fires started in sixteen different points of Smyrna. The Turks, after they have pillaged all the Greek and Armenian houses and shops, are now burning the city of Smyrna after they burned Koukloukka. The devouring element helped by the strong wind continues its destructive work. No human power can stop it. Our sweet, beautiful Smyrna, our Ionian Bride is burned by the Turks, whom the French call 'civilized.' The fire engines protect only the Turkish quarters, which are not touched.

Million People in Streets.

"The fire continues. I, with my family, am shut up in the Standard. But there is a fear that we are going to be burned alive and the director orders the building to be evacuated. Nearly one million people are in the streets. The flames surround us. Fortunately the wind changes and the fire spares our shelter of the Standard Trading corporation. I decide to return to it, but how? The Turkish guard, taking advantage of the absence of the director sells entrance for 25 lire a person.

"There is an order of Kemal by which departure is not allowed to men from seventeen to forty-five. I belong to the class. The Turks run around looking for the Christians. They arrest all the men and take them away. The martyrdom they suffer is terrible. On September 22 the Turkish guard of the corporation betrayed our hiding place and the Turks came and gathered every man in the warehouse, myself included. I presented an English paper of no value that I had in my pocket, telling the brute who caught me that I was an American citizen and that was my passport. He believed it and let me go.

"Through a French certificate that my brother-in-law possessed I was able to embark on a French boat with my family for Syria, to which the boat was bound. There we were not accepted as refugees and they sent us to Tinos. Now I am writing to you from on board the boat going to Piræus where I go to get work. I do not know what became of father and Evangelos."

MUCH USED TIN

Japanese Factories Will Make It into Toys for American Children.

Christmas toys from Japan being unloaded at Seattle are said to include novelties made from tin which has crossed the Pacific many times.

The tin cans originally are used in shipping case oil to China, there refilled with soy bean and other vegetable oils and reshipped back to the United States.

These cans, emptied into tank cars in Puget Sound ports, were then purchased by agents of Japanese toy factories, flattened out, baled and sent back to the Orient as low-rate ballast cargo. Once in the toy shops of Japan the much used tin was quickly made over into very attractive, amusing mechanical playthings for boys and girls of America.

Japan, while almost self-sustaining in all her world wide commerce, lacks for manufacturing purposes, faster essentials wood, iron, and tin.

DAIRY HINTS

EXCELLENT GIFT FOR YOUTH

Department of Agriculture Suggests Purebred Calf, Pig or Some Other Animal.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In selecting birthday and Christmas gifts for children in rural communities, why not give a purebred pig, calf, or other animal? This is the suggestion of the United States Department of Agriculture, which, with the various states, is conducting the "Better Sires—Better Stock" campaign. A recent questionnaire study of the utility value of purebred live stock showed, among other results, that home influence is an important factor governing the breeding of superior domestic animals. In fact, it ranks in importance next to sales, fairs, and shows, taken collectively. When parents show their interest in good stock the children are more likely to do so.

One breeder told of receiving some purebred live stock as a wedding gift from his father-in-law. That beginning was an important influence, which resulted in an entire herd of well-bred, profitable animals, a practical influence in the couple's prosperity and happiness.

Gifts of good live stock, the department points out, are not only acceptable in themselves but with proper handling multiply and give pleasure, satisfaction, and financial benefits for an indefinite period.

Common Sense Counts

Success in the dairy business or in keeping even a small herd of dairy cows depends (like most things do) in a great measure upon the use of good common sense. Cows produce the most milk usually in the latter part of May and June. Therefore what does the wise dairy farmer do? He maintains as nearly as possible the year round, the conditions of those months when production is the highest.

Painable food, a succulent ration and a balanced ration, together with a moderate temperature and comfortable surroundings, will bring as near the ideal producing conditions as is possible, and an effort to keep conditions so will pay big returns.

FEED DRY COW ON ROUGHAGE

Daily Allowance of Bran or Oats Is Favored—Cabbage and Pumpkins Are Very Good.

During the eight or ten weeks that cows go dry, their food should be chiefly roughage. A daily allowance of two pounds of bran or oats, or a mixture of two parts each of bran and oats and one part of linseed meal or corn-oil meal makes a proper feed for a cow near calving. Some roots, cabbage, pumpkins, or squashes are also very good. High-calcareous roughage, such as straw and corn stalks, is not good at this particular time. Such feeds, with cold water, cold drafts, or lying out at night on damp or frozen ground, are the chief causes of calving trouble or garget.

Cleanliness in Everything.

Milk pails and other utensils should be free so far as is possible from crevices where dirt may lodge and be hard to remove. Cream separators and other dairy utensils should always be cleaned properly immediately after use. This practice not only improves the quality of the milk and cream but makes the work easier and the utensils last longer.

Clean Utensils.

All utensils which come in contact with milk and cream should be kept clean at all times. It is well to use pails with a partially covered top because this keeps out 50 per cent of the dirt and other impurities which would otherwise get into the milk.

Safeguards in Calf Feeding.

Criticism in a calf's life is when his feed is changed from whole milk to skim milk. To avoid scours make the change very gradually, adding a little skim milk to the whole milk each day.

Find the Prisoner Not Guilty

By CHARLES E. BAXTER
(© 1922, Western Newspaper Union.)

He was defended by an indifferent lawyer, and he appeared not to have the ghost of a chance till he went into the box. To begin, he had just come out of the pen after serving a sentence of fourteen years for burglary and assault.

He had been a criminal all his life, starting as a sneak thief and graduating as a strong-arm man. He was mid-dle-aged, undersized, though strong, a stubble of beard fringed his unwashed face, his eyes were shifty. He could just read and his writing abilities were limited to being able to sign his name.

Of course nobody thought he had the ghost of a chance of escaping on the manslaughter charge.

He slouched into the box, and took the oath indifferently.

"The prisoner will tell his story in his own way," his counsel had said.

He glanced indifferently at the jury, who sat back with bored expressions. They had already made up their minds. The judge had made up his. It was to be twenty years.

"I sure did kill Stiff Larrigan."

The prisoner's counsel elevated his eyebrows and smiled at the prosecuting attorney. That was not the way to begin. The prosecuting attorney smiled back at the other. He didn't care what sentence the prisoner got; it was all in the day's work to him, and there was a woman charged with homicide to follow. Much more interesting than the affairs of this prisoner-bird.

"I sure did kill him—but listen, yer honor. He played a d—n low trick—"

The judge rapped smartly. "Such language will not be tolerated in court," he said.

The prisoner looked apologetic. "It's this way, yer honor," he said. "Stiff Larrigan and me was pals. We pulled off a whole bag of tricks and the police never got wise to us. There was five burglaries in Philadelphia—"

Sensation. What was the prisoner's counsel doing, permitting him to give his case away?

"Then there was that case in Pittsburgh. Stiff, me and Bill Oates framed it up. The cops got us and I got fifteen years in the pen. I ain't kicking. I served twelve and got out on good conduct."

"Before I went up for trial I got word from Stiff. If I wouldn't give certain things away he'd see that me wife and the kid didn't come to want. So I took me medicine and said nix."

"Fifteen years is a long time, yer honor, even when three of it gets docked. But I served me time and come out. Me wife had stopped coming after the first year or two. Fact is she died."

He drew his ragged sleeve across his eyes. The judge, emotionally provoked, wondered whether twenty-five years wouldn't do better than twenty.

"She died of hunger, yer honor. It was the bad year—no work, and Stiff, he hadn't done what he'd said he'd do. When I come out her tombstone had already begun to topple over."

"Confine yourself to the evidence," snarled the judge.

The prisoner sniffed. "I wanted to get even with Stiff Larrigan over that, but after a while I give up troubling. It didn't seem to matter when she'd been dead so long, and if Stiff had forgotten, well, I guess lots of others would have."

"Strange thing was about the kid, though. You see, yer honor, the old woman had been proud. Wouldn't let the neighbors know she was starving—but the kid—well, she'd saved all the scraps for him. After she died some one took him away. I found at last that it was Stiff. Guessed he'd had a spark of conscience or something."

"I set off to find him. But Stiff had got mixed up in some trouble and was lying low. And then they looked on me as a stool-pigeon for a long time and wouldn't let me see him. You got forgotten after serving twelve year."

"But at last I did find Stiff. It was by accident more'n anything else. I was in a scatter and saw three men talking together, and overheard how they was planning to pull off a trick. I knew one of them for Stiff immediately. The other was Red Rube."

"The third was Dick. Kid of seventeen, yer honor, and Stiff had brought him up to be a sneak thief like his daddy started. I listened, and I thought of his mother, and I picked up an iron bar I seed and laid Stiff out. That's all, yer honor."

The jury stirred in the box. The prosecuting attorney woke up too late to realize that he had thrown away his chances. The jury consulted without retiring.

"... agreed upon your verdict?"

"We find the prisoner not guilty."

"Prisoner, you are discharged," snapped the judge. "You've had a lucky escape."

The prisoner's eyes turned toward the court. A boy of seventeen, seated among the visitors, came quickly toward him. They clasped hands and, arm in arm, left the court together.

"Call the next case!" snapped the judge.

How Doctor Doyle Started.

You never can tell. S. S. McClure relates that once, calling upon Andrew Lang in London, while on a search for action, the latter casually remarked that a doctor named Doyle was turning out some lively "penny shockers." Plus was the great A. Conan, Sherlock Holmes and all brought to America.—New York World.

OUTER WRAPS

Garments Feature Artistic Quality and Beauty.

Women Are Paying More Attention to Coats and Capes Than to Dresses.

Whatever the occasion, be they the hours of shopping or working, the afternoon hours of leisure, the Parisienne still finds a street wrap that has every quality and beauty about it. A Paris fashion correspondent in New York Times. This is the age of the beautiful coat. Women are paying more attention to their outer wraps than to their dresses, and are wearing them with more grace and character.

Paris, especially, the street wraps are developing with marked grace. The season's openings prove that the many examples of re-wrap building make their debut. A wrap of beige crepe is completely covered with an intricate pattern in silk embroidery and thread, imitating the gorgeous robes of the ancient Hindus. It has an exquisite collection of capes trimmed with fur, and black fringes of black. The collars are extremely high, rising at the back until they reach the crown of the hat. Certain wraps express the freedom and of the Cossack's robe.

Renée's the afternoon wraps are more or less the semblance of the draped and elongated costume. The fur collars of her fabric are not so exaggerated as in the other showings. But the jackets amply compensate for this slighting of the luxurious and are created with a lavish and are created with a lavish black fox and worn with a black trim with the same fur. A of the smart fur "sea dog," and of caracul imitate the Russian. Each is worn with a black trim with the same fur. A of the smart fur "sea dog," and of caracul imitate the Russian. Each is worn with a black trim with the same fur.

Curlet makes his wraps extremely long and surprisingly narrow.

Tones of Gray Velours—One Very Dark and One Very Light—Combined With Embroidery in the Same Tones to Make Smart Street Wrap.

The waistline indicated by a Japanese kimono effect. Much matelasse used and some of it is combined with leather tones of cloxy.

Afternoon mantles and daytime wraps at Jenny's have snugly fitting skirts, from which swing large panels far as the waist, where they are lined by wide girdles. These extend to either side to form wide sleeves, which are really only for the arms to pass through. A sees a number of short, furry coats. A short coat is of white silk, trimmed with white and black.

SCARF GAY AND DAINTY

Useful Accessory as Filmy as Finest Silk; Wool Used in the Home-spun Weave.

Among the most colorful accessories of the fall wardrobe are the new scarves. They are as filmy as the silk but with a somewhat firmer texture. Composed of inch wide stripes, two of which are the same color, rival Joseph's coat of garter. A daintiness is gained by an all-over eyelet embroidery and the extremely long fringe.

Another very delicate scarf is developed in wool in the popular homespun style. Although the pattern is very like that used in burlap, the threads are so fine that the thing is much heavier than a thick veil, and by virtue of the wool decidedly warmer.

When Sewing Lace. Never make a seam in joining lace. Over and over or else buttonhole stitch with buttonhole stitches. Endeavor to join on the edge of a design to hide the joining place.

Seaman's Belief. He will never find a sailor man using a glass to "ring" without putting his hand at once to stop it. He says that when a glass is struck accidentally, and rings, a man is coming at sea. To put out your hand to stop it saves him!

PANEL BELOW THE HEMLINE

Whether the beaded robe be simple or as decorative as the model illustrated above, a ribbon sash gives a longer line, emphasizing the vogue for the panel below the hemline. This girde of moire ribbon is simply tied with ends of uneven lengths. Sashes have come into their own again, particularly for the straight-line frock which requires this additional touch to create the unevenness of the hem, so desirable in costumes this season.

AMONG NEW EVENING CLOAKS

Late Fashions Are Gorgeous in Material and Decorative in Outline; Collars Are Higher.

Very gorgeous are the new evening cloaks. Gorgeous in material and curiously decorative in outline. The idea of the top of a garment being tight and the lower part very full is gaining favor every day, according to a fashion authority in the Boston Globe. We find it exploited in coats, wraps and dresses.

But it is in the world of evening mantles that we find this idea most prominent. Over the shoulders the rich materials are drawn so tight that they mold the form, then—perhaps half way down—there comes a sudden flare. It is a picturesque fashion but not altogether comfortable because the tight top confines the arms still. It is the "latest thing" and the chic Parisiennes look upon it with eyes of favor.

A beautiful mantle was a symphony in copper tints and rich browns. The shaped top was literally covered with copper and dull gold embroideries and the red brown chiffon velvet which formed the gigantic flounce was set into these embroideries and at the lower edge caught in to form a sort of puff. Then there was a regal looking collar of dark mink and linings of copper red satin. This was a wonderful model, a riot of autumnal tints, and it represents everything that is new in the world of fashion.

Collars get higher and higher and the Medici designs are great favorites. For coats and wraps these collars may be made of fur or of the material—provided the latter be thick and very supple.

THE LARGE HAT IS DOOMED

Broad, Flapping Headgear Must Give Way to That of Medium and the Small Size.

Everywhere one hears a great deal about the large hat. In fact, manufacturers have placed so much importance on wide-brimmed models that women are led to believe that the small hat is about to pass from fashion. This, however, is not true, says a fashion writer in the New York Tribune. In fact, the small hat will be far in the lead as soon as the time comes to wear coats with high miffing collars.

One logical reason for the present popularity of the wide-brimmed type is that it is difficult to get away from the midsummer models that so becomingly shadowed the face. Another is the fact that the prevailing silhouette always influences the shape of hats. Long skirts require broad-brimmed models, while short skirts require smaller ones. The momentary craze for large hats might be attributed to the sudden popularity of long skirts. Dressmakers already feel that they cannot make the very long skirt a permanent fashion. Therefore the large hat must give way to those of medium and small sizes.

New Shades of Green. There are half a dozen new shades of green offered in silk crepe and chiffon velvet frocks, known variously as bronze, reseda, scarabee, sea-serpent and haricot vert.

Boys' Topcoats. Very smart are little boys' topcoats in shades of gray and taupe with collars of squirrel and beaver.

Town Has Biggest Dance Hall. The town of Douglas, in the Isle of Man, boasts of having the largest and most comprehensive place of amusement in the world. One of its chief features is a dance hall capable of accommodating a thousand couples at one time.

THE LONG RIBBON STREAMERS

Radiating from the center of the crown of her hat over the brim with short lengths in front, lengthening toward the back, are ribbon streamers, row upon row. At the back, the streamers reach to the very hem of the skirt, fastened in at the waistline to give an effect charming and distinctive. The dahlias which trim the crown of the hat and the girde are made of very narrow ribbon, row upon row, surrounding a tiny button.

A JACKET WITHOUT SLEEVES

French Maker Devises Interesting Garment to Be Worn With Afternoon Dresses.

Many of the most important dress-makers disclaim any effort toward the sensational silhouette. To meet the demand for new styles they vary their characteristic lines by beautiful fabrics, striking colors and trimming details.

Chanel has made no basic changes in the styles which she exploits. Her dresses are straightline, many of them with beautiful embroideries. She uses laces profusely. Among her prettiest models are some frocks of flowered silks, the flowers scattered over a plain background in the form of large motifs. These silks are veiled with lace, giving an extremely pleasing effect. Several of her afternoon dresses are accompanied by little sleeveless jackets. Such models frequently carry Russian embroideries.

The greatest change in the models made by Callot is in the colorings. There is a considerable showing of paler shades of blue and rose. She has given preference to these paler hues over the rich oriental shades which she used last season. She also used many silks in pompadour effects. Other than in color Callot has done practically nothing new in the way of fashions. There are unusual variations of old themes. This designer uses embroideries, ribbons and laces even more profusely than she has in the past.

Sleeves are varied and interesting. They are frequently long and fitted to the arm, and they are often absent entirely from dance frocks. They have a penchant for being long, open and hanging. Cape sleeves are popular in many fashion houses, and frequently we have the addition of a long, hanging cuff. Gauntlet cuffs appear on models in nearly all collections. Worth shows them, on a black broadcloth coat, made of bright embroidery and lined with Hudson seal. Paton's new sleeve is tight at wrist and shoulder and swells a little toward the elbow. He often adds a turned-back cuff just below the elbow. Lanvin shows an immense bishop's sleeve in softest crepe de chine.

COATS ARE IN ALL LENGTHS

Garment Reaching Hips Most Popular; Has Lost Bloused Character; Belt Is Omitted.

Little change has taken place in the general line of street clothes offered in the winter collections. The tailors are found with jackets of all lengths—short, hip-length, three-quarter, and long; here and there is a real belted length, barely reaching to waist and falling straight from the shoulders. The length which just reaches the hip is perhaps the most general, but it has lost the bloused character it possessed last year, and in most cases has given up its narrow belt, though here and there the belt does persist, especially in models which are designed for country or sports wear. Its lines are very close.

Satin Hats. Large satin hats, in black and in all shades of brown, are featured in the smart millinery shops. Twisted velvet rosettes or flowers of velvet or silk are frequently the only trimming.

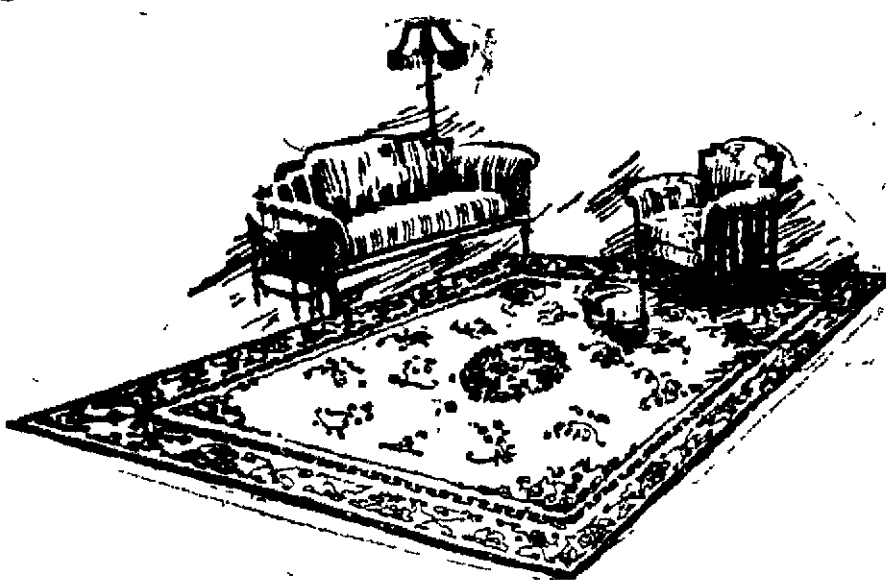

Cut-Steel Earrings. Long earrings of cut steel have almost the brilliancy of moon settings.

Two Tasks in One. When painting is being done around the house, coat the windows in that vicinity with cleaning powder before the painting is started. Then, when the painting is completed, the windows can be cleaned of both powder and paint.

THIRD PARTY MEN GET A SETBACK

Progressives Cold to Proposal but Purpose Abolishment of Electoral College and Campaign for Direct Primaries for All Elective Offices.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, Dec. 1.—A sweeping nationwide reorganization of the country's elective system was one of the chief planks of the platform adopted today at the "progressive conference" at the capitol, of present and newly-elected members of congress.

The meeting, which opened a series of two day conferences here of progressives of all parties in and out of congress, went on record as being opposed to the organization of any "third party" movement after Senators La Follette of Wisconsin, Norris of Nebraska and other speakers had declared emphatically that the gathering had no such purpose.

A resolution was adopted unanimously by which "the progressive minded senators and representatives of all parties" purpose to create special committees for dealing with agriculture, labor, railroads, shipping, natural resources, credits and taxation; to seek to abolish the electoral college and for the earlier meeting of newly-elected congresses; for direct, open primaries for all elective offices, including the presidency and for effective federal and state corrupt practices acts.

Special mention is made of the kindness of Mrs. Augustus H. Van Buren in playing before the curtain rose and during the intermissions on Tuesday evening, to the enjoyment of all lovers of old time melodies. Gregory and Company loaned the furniture for the very pretty drawing-room scene.

Too Much Learning.

"After a man gets a certain amount of education," said Uncle Eben, "he has to learn to forget some of it so it won't keep getting in his way."—Washington Evening Star.

THAT MIGHT ACCOUNT FOR IT

Anyway, Badgered Witness Gave Pompous Magistrate Something to Think About for a Moment.

An illiterate man was in the witness box, and the pompous magistrate sought to improve the occasion while emphasizing his own superiority.

"What! Unable to read or write, he said, sternly. 'And with all the advantages for education that are provided by modern civilization! You have had equal opportunities with myself, for instance, but your neglect of them would quite unfit you to sit in my place. How is it that I have become a public man and a magistrate, while you lack even the rudiments of education?'"

The worm turned.

"Well," he replied, "I suppose it's because you wasn't so smart as me in dodging the school-attendance officer."

FRANKIE QUITE UP TO DATE

No Reason at All Why Conversation

Needed to Be Guarded in the Youth's Presence.

Such a generation!

There go the little flappers, innocently indifferent to the talk which they have caused. Watch the sweet barbarians, all at play, and admit that the ages have not seen their equal. As Tiny Tim didn't say, "God bless 'em, every one."

It is, indeed, a wonderful age in which we live, as every age before was wonderful in its time, and as every age will be, thank heaven. It was Lucretius who first told of the old playman, gazing forlornly over the land, and sighing for a return of the "old days."

There is a woman in this town who does not belong to the tribe of sighing playmen. She believes that life is good, and not wicked. She is free, that is all, refusing to be held down by the old oppressions and inhibitions. She has a little boy just about old enough to talk.

The other day, at a function she was giving, something went wrong. It was a slight thing, but enough to irritate her.

Ladies of the old school would have expressed vexation.

This modern lady—and she is such in the best sense of the term "gentle woman"—used a plain epithet.

"Oh, you shouldn't use such words before little Frankie," a woman friend laughed.

"Oh, he can swear," the mother said, calmly. "Say 'D—n' for the lady, honey."—Washington Star.

GOING UP

"Talk is cheap."

"Going up, I fear. Seems to be a general tendency to boost telephone rates all over the country."

The Clover Leaf Unlucky.

Four-leaf clovers are not always as lucky as they are reported to be. A golfer was disqualified at the 37th hole in the finals of the northern California professional golf tournament in Delmonte, when he picked a four-leaf clover and then brushed the line of putt with his hand. It was the only disqualification in many years in an important match, but was according to a well-known rule about removing anything from the fairway.

Probably Will Be Trouble.

An Oregon rancher says that he has found a quail mothering two Plymouth Rock chickens, whose mother was sitting on a nest of native pheasant eggs. The quail and the hen were found in the woods near the rancher's home. The rancher was unable to determine just what had caused the domestic mixup of wild and tame fowl. He predicted that the "mothers" would find life somewhat complicated after a few weeks.

Duckling Hatched Without Eyes.

Still another story of a freak duckling comes from Manitoba. A correspondent of a Canadian newspaper says that three weeks ago a duckling, without eyes, was hatched. It is normal in every other respect, eating and drinking without having to be fed.

Horse Had Hump When Foaled.

An old horse has just died in Saskatchewan that had a hump on its back like a camel. Twenty years ago the colt was born with a hump; the owner intended at first to kill it, but changed his mind and the animal has worked faithfully for 15 years.

Renowned Mathematical Treatise.
Newton's Principia is a world-renowned mathematical treatise by Sir Isaac Newton (1642-1727), published by the Royal Society or by Halley, in 1687. Its full title is Philosophiæ Naturalis Principia Mathematica (The Mathematical Principles of Natural Philosophy). The work consists of three parts, the first and second of which deal with the motions of bodies, and the third with the solar system. Laplace regarded the Principia as "pre-eminent above all other productions of the human intellect." The great discovery which characterizes the "Principia" is that of the principle of universal gravitation, that every particle of matter in the universe is attracted by or gravitates to, every other particle of matter with a force inversely proportional to the squares of their distances.

Protection Against Lightning.
There is no doubt that many citizens have often wondered why it is that the large gasoline tanks that carry their supply down to filling stations always have a chain dragging from the rear with six inches or more touching the ground. Many, perhaps, have thought it was due to the carelessness of the driver, but one of the mahouts that pilot these elephantine carriers told me the other day that the chain was placed in that position so that if the tank should be struck by lightning the bolt would follow the chain to the ground and that in 50 cases out of 100 there would be no explosion of gasoline—another mystery solved.—Exchange.

TRINITY TROUPE PLAYS AT "Y"

Wednesday evening, the members of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. were delightfully entertained by a group from the Trinity M. E. Church. The first number was a piano duet by the Misses Ethel Mauterstock and Gladys Raichle. Next Miss Mauterstock gave a very humorous reading about a former Yale student who accidentally got aboard a Harvard yacht in the guise of an old lady at the boat race between Yale and Harvard. The main feature of the evening was a pantomime, "Mary Jane." Miss Mauterstock read the story. Mary Jane was a school teacher, and every morning passed through a farmer's corn field on her way to work. One morning the farmer's son, Benjamin, spied her, and struck by her great beauty, fell in love with her and proposed immediately. The dignified school marm spurned the crude tiller of the soil and passed on. Benjamin swore she would be sorry. The next few mornings she did not see Benjamin, and as it is true that absence makes the heart grow fonder, Mary Jane regretted that she had turned down his proposal. One morning as she was on her way to the school-house, Benjamin came out and seated himself on the wall. An angry cow came after him and threatened his life. Mary Jane, went to his rescue and drove off the beast with her parasol. The next step was the second proposal, followed by breaking the news to Mary Jane's father, who was more indignant over it than Mary Jane was at the first display of Benjamin's rudeness. After "Daddy" had put the ban on the marriage, Benjamin went to sea and Mary Jane remained at home to grieve for his return. A wealthy man came to claim her, but she refused him. Enraged by his daughter's refusal to marry this man and other well-to-dos, "Daddy" threatened to slay Mary Jane. After she had held off for several years, he announced that her day had come, and prepared to put her out of the way with a wicked looking knife. He was twice interrupted by a tramp and then by a book peddler. He heard another knock at the door, but would not answer. Just as the evil knife was descending, the door was forced open and in rushed Benjamin, home from the sea. A wealthy man, Mary Jane and he left "Daddy" standing, and walked on to the tune of the wedding bells. The part of Mary Jane was excellently played by Miss Ruth Tongue. Arthur Flemming was a very realistic and dashing lover in the part of Benjamin, his manner of proposal being equal to that of Rodolph Valentino. Sophisticated and commanding was "Daddy" as played by R. J. Cocks. The wealthy man was played by Ed Illius.

Among the many laughable features in the stage setting was the curtain, Clifford Moser, holding a card with the word written on it, lest he be taken for an actor. The rising sun was regulated by a string over the top of the door, the sun being a red spot on a piece of cardboard. The field of corn and the wall existed in the imagination of the audience in the spot where cards indicated. From beginning to end, the production was a laughter inspiring one.

After the entertainment refreshments were served, the delicacies being apples, popcorn and hard candies. The boys seemed to enjoy the entertainment very much, and are in hopes that the social committee has another good one like it for some future date.

K. H. S. WINS FINAL GAME OF SEASON

Thanksgiving Afternoon, Defeating St. Stephen's Seconds 6 to 0—Locals Score in First Period, but Poor Management of Team, Along With Fumbling Prevents Chance of Big Score.

Thanksgiving, Kingston High School closed the football season by scoring a victory over the second team from St. Stephen's College. The lone touchdown of the game, giving K. H. S. her six points came when Carroll caught a forward pass from Vogt in the first quarter. As it seemed at the beginning, K. H. S. was about prepared to make up in that game for all the points made by the opposing teams in previous games, but, as was the case all season, it was only at the beginning of the game that it seemed so. The Maroon and White team started at a race-horse pace, and claimed the first quarter for themselves; but near the end of the second quarter, the battle became a matter of "50-50ism," and the second half found the locals on the more glorious side of the fray. At several instances in the second half, the Saints threatened to score, but Kingston's defensive power proved too great. In the last quarter, Kingston had a wonderful chance to score, the ball being within the ten yard line. Poor directing of plays by Vogt, when he threw a forward pass on the second down lost the chance for the locals. The pass was blocked behind the end line, a touchback credited to the Saints and the ball brought to the twenty yard line, with Annandale on the offensive. The visitors were held after the play, Kingston regain the ball on their opponents' thirty yard line after a poor punt by the visitors, but the locals were too far gone to revive the wonderful attack they had at the beginning of the game, and lost ground instead of gaining it, the end of the game finding the ball on the forty-two yard line. In the third quarter, Kingston was not fighting mad, but in the fourth most of the players were too mad. One of Kingston's players, who has earned a wonderful reputation all season for his clean and consistent playing lost his temper and also much of his reputation in the last five minutes of the last game he will ever play as a representative of K. H. S. Luckily, a member of the visiting team had also forgotten himself, and no penalty was imposed upon either team. It was their eagerness in a large measure that accounted for the locals' many fumbles in the last few minutes of play.

Vogt played a good game as a quarterback, although not as a director of play. He threw some excellent forward passes and all his punts were better than those of any of the opposing team. Mac Fadden and Carroll fished fine at ends, both showing up very well on the defensive as well as the offensive. Cassidy was on the job at center with his usual grit and determination, and no play went through his position without one of the interferences knowing that there was someone there. O'Reilly kept his record of being a stonewall on the defensive and someone to fear on account of his ability to break through and block kicks. Davenport and Fred Anderson played their final game as true wearers of the Maroon and White. Neither of these players has been commented upon much, but their service to the team has been real service all the season through, and their last game was played as well as their first. Souers hit the line with great force and showed some good brain work on the defensive. His good tackling accounted for more than one lost chance for the visitors. Longyear made his debut before Kingston fans, as a member of the first team and by his playing showed that he deserves the name of a football player. Leverett and Symmonetti, who were sent in as subs for Souers and O'Reilly when the latter two were injured, held up their part of the battle very well.

Vogt started the ball in motion by kicking off out of bounds. The ball was put in play on the twenty-five yard line. The first big gain the Saints made was in the second scrimmage, by Pfister, when he gained twenty yards and a first down on a forward pass. After fumbling and failing to complete another pass, they kicked, and Souers ran the ball back to the forty yard line. The work of Longyear, Anderson and Souers, and Vogt's passing ability gave Kingston three first downs in succession, then Carroll carried the ball over the line on a pass from Vogt. Vogt's drop-kick for the extra point was blocked. Vogt kicked off and the ball was put in play on the twenty-five yard line. A forward pass gave the Saints twenty-five yards, making up for the several losses they had suffered. Souers intercepted a forward pass and it was Kingston's ball in the center of the field. Kingston was penalized five yards for off-side on the next play. Anderson and Vogt made up for it by gaining thirty yards on a forward pass. Kingston lost the ball on downs. Davenport broke through and spoiled the next play. Annandale penalized five points for off-side. The quarter ended with the ball in possession of the visitors on their own thirty-one yard line.

Annandale kicked out of bounds and the ball went to Kingston on the thirty-five yard line. Anderson got ten yards on a pass. The ball was steadily advanced. A forward pass within the ten yard line was incompletable, a touchback called and the ball went to St. Stephen's on the twenty yard line. A first down was made, then the visitors were held and forced to kick. Kingston made two first downs and the half ended with the ball in possession of the locals on their opponents' eighteen yard line.

Vogt opened the second half by kicking the ball forty yards. It was carried back to the thirty yard line. Center rush and forward pass gave the visitors a first down. Souers intercepted a pass. Kingston was forced to punt. Kingston regained the ball when one of the locals fell on it after it had been touched by an Annandale player. Three first downs brought the ball to the ten yard line. Kingston was unable to score and upon receiving the ball on downs, St. Stephen's punted out of bounds, and the ball was started again on the twenty yard line. Souers advanced the ball two yards and the quarter ended with Kingston in possession of the pigskin on their opponents' eighteen yard line. A pass was intercepted by one of the visitors. Forced to kick, the visitors gained ten yards on the punt and regained the ball when Kingston fumbled it. St. Stephen's here began an aerial campaign, but failed in three tries, then kicked. Another fumble by the Kingston men trying to catch the punt gave the visitors the ball on the thirty yard line. Carroll made an excellent tackle and prevented the visitors from gaining an inch on the lateral pass. Carroll intercepted a pass and it was Kingston's ball on the thirty yard line. Vogt was forced to kick, and Annandale soon returned the compliment. A sensational pass from Vogt to Anderson gave the locals forty yards and brought the ball to the twenty yard line. A first down was made, the ball now being on the six yards line. Leverett brought it to the four yard line on a center rush. Here Vogt showed poor policy, when, with but four yards to go, he attempted a forward pass. The pass fell incompletable, and the ball was given to the visitors on the twenty-yard line. Kingston soon regained the ball on downs, but lost ground in the successive plays. A forward pass was intercepted by an Annandale player just as the whistle blew. The game ended with the ball in possession of St. Stephen's on their own forty yard line.

Substitutions: Kingston, Symmonetti for O'Reilly, O'Reilly for Symmonetti, Leverett for Souers. Officials: Referee, Hall (Springfield), umpire, Miller, (Springfield), head linesman, Sears (Springfield). First down made: St. Stephen's, 4; Kingston, 11.

Walt Whitman's Daily Bread.
Few poets have had a more varied existence than Walt Whitman, who began his career as an errand boy in a lawyer's office and tried in turn working in a printer's office, teaching in a country school and editing the Brooklyn Eagle. He founded and edited his own paper, the Long Islander, but gave it up and tried building and selling small houses in Brooklyn. During this checkered career, Whitman was continually writing poetry, and finally, in 1855, he published a small book containing a collection of his poems, under the title of "Leaves of Grass." It was characterized by Emerson as "the most extraordinary piece of wit and wisdom that America had yet contributed. Whitman's life was a poet's life—free, unburdened, unworldly, unconventional, unselfish, cheerful, optimistic, and it was contentedly and joyously lived.

KINGSTON AGAIN CONQUERS COHOES

In Rough Contest at Armory Wednesday—Local Leaders Are Still Going Strong at Opening of Second Round—Borgman Again Big Scorer.

The Kingston representatives won their contest from the Cohoes quintet Wednesday evening at the home court by a 29 to 17 score. The game was the locals' first match in the second round of the first half league race. To date the Morgenweck clan has the substantial average of ten won and one lost.

The Kingston team had a collection of eight players to pick from, Nick Harvey making his first appearance on the home court. Nick didn't get into the game, the same combination that has been so successful in previous games being started. Beginning the second period C. Husta replaced A. Powers at forward and C. Powers took the pivot position. Knoblauch playing guard. The Cohoes team had a new player, Smythe, a former Eastern league man, playing a guard position. During the nightcap session Johnson replaced Kampmier in front.

The Morgenweck clan again showed that it is a band of leaders, with its systematic playing, that was dazzling and spectacular to the fans. Cohoes put up a strong fight and the entire contest was anything but a walkover for the local team. Benny Borgman, leader in individual scoring records, was again up to his standard, caging a total of twelve points. Tripple, playing center for the upstarts was the next best with a total of six points. Both teams were off on the foul shooting, Kingston made 13 out of 27 and Cohoes 7 out of 22.

The visitors got first blood, Tripple sinking one from the playground. Borgman made the locals' first point caging one from the penalty line. Borgman had his eye with him in this contest. Besides making four out of the same number called from the free gift line, he also caged three field baskets. Bergkamp opposed Benny and he sure had a strenuous evening following him when he darted to the basket like a rifle shot. Tripple seemed to be easily fouled at the center position. He was given six tries but only made good three. After the first few minutes of playing the local aggregation took the lead and stayed in front throughout the period. Referee Meehan didn't display any judgment that was surprising. Along with the large number of fouls called there was at least twice as many toss ups, which slowed up the game considerably. Kingston left the court with the first half honors 16 to 11.

The upstarts also made the first point in the final period, but their baskets in this session were few and far between. During this half despite the saddling and clinching, the local team made thirteen points and allowed the Cohoes tribe but six. C. Husta made two fields and a foul, while in the struggle Husta played an exceptionally good game, especially on the tap from center. Knoblauch at the guard work, made a field and a foul. The upstarts were unable to hold the local leaders during this period and the game ended with Kingston in front of 27 to 19 score. The usual dancing, music supplied by Balfe's orchestra, followed the game and was enjoyed by a large number.

Toothpicks Not Needed.

In a bulletin on care of the teeth. Issued by the bureau of public health education, New York, it is pointed out that the triangular pad of gum which fills the space between the necks of the teeth prevents food from being forced between the teeth laterally; just as the contact points of the crowns of adjacent teeth prevent food from being jammed down by vertical pressure. Using a toothpick will, after a short time, press down these points of gum and then food will lodge between the teeth and start decay. A normal mouth does not need a toothpick.

What Elephants Eat.

An elephant, in his native land, has a hard job to find what he likes to eat. Contrary to the general belief, he will not eat anything; but he selects carefully the best of roots, herbs, fruits and various vegetables. When in captivity, he eats about the same kind of fodder, with a few exceptions, including pastry, bread, nuts (chiefly peanuts) and some other goodies which may be offered to him. Elephants eat no kind of meat whatsoever; they will only eat pure grown food or clean bread or pastry.

When Sugar Was a Novelty.

During the Middle Ages, when sugar was first used in England, it was known as "Indian salt," a rare and precious substance only for medicinal use or for the very rich. In the early colonial days sugar was a great luxury, and became a staple article of food only with the growth of the custom of drinking tea and coffee. An American newspaper of 1750 contains an advertisement of an "artist" who is experienced in the "mystery" of refining sugar.

The Star Spangled Banner.

The Lodge and Friends.
O, say, can you see by the dawn's early light,

What so proudly we hail'd at the twilight's last gleaming,
Whose broad stripes and bright stars,
thro' the perilous fight,
O'er our ramparts we watch'd, were so gallantly streaming?
And the rockets red glare, the bombs bursting in air, Gave proof thro' the night that our flag was still there.

O say, does the star spangled banner yet wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave?

Benediction. Rev. Edw. M. H. Knapp

BOYS' CONFERENCE
OPENS AT THE "Y"

This afternoon, the older boys' conference opened at the Y. M. C. A. Registration took place at 2 o'clock. At 4:30 the opening session will take place at the St. James M. E. Church, which will be the conference church. Tonight at 6 o'clock is the supper at the "Y" and at 7:30 evening session at the church. The committee in charge had planned on having about three hundred delegates, but this morning there were only about one hundred and fifty registration cards in. The hospitality of the citizens of this city was well shown by the number who offered to entertain the fellows. There were about twice as many rooms offered as there will be delegates, which is certainly gratifying to the local "Y". A small bronze button with a cross on it will indicate the fellows who are delegates to the conference.

MIDDLETOWN HIGH HAS BEST RECORD

Middletown High School rounded out one of the most successful seasons it has had in years by defeating the Port Jervis High School in their annual Thanksgiving day clash 18-7. Port Jervis gave the Middletown followers a severe jolt when they scored in the first few minutes of play. However, Middletown found her bearings soon after and succeeded in holding Port Jervis scoreless while scoring 18 points herself. Middletown has gone through the year undefeated holding victories over Kingston, Poughkeepsie, Newburgh, Highland Mills, and the St. Stephen seconds and has claimed the championship of the Hudson valley as well as the Orange county championship which it seems she is justified in doing in view of the fact that she has defeated all three teams in the valley league and holds a decisive victory of 26-7 over the league champions.

ST. STEPHEN'S TEAM
LOSES AT PROVIDENCE

St. Stephen's college football team journeyed to Providence, Rhode Island, to meet their second defeat of the season, this time at the hands of Providence College, to the tune of 22-13 on Thanksgiving afternoon. St. Stephens scored her thirteen points by means of the forward pass but her line failed to stave off the line plunges of the Providence College boys. Although defeated in this their last game the Annadallians have closed one of the best seasons in their history and as they lose only two men by graduation this year everything looks bright for another successful season next year when they tackle such colleges as Hamilton, C. C. N. Y., Hobart, St. Lawrence University, Rhode Island State and the Conn. Aggies.

STUYVESANT HIGH IS OVERWHELMINGLY DEFEATED

Stuyvesant High School, the champions of New York city, went down to defeat Thanksgiving day afternoon at the hands of Harrisburg Tech, 65-0. Stuyvesant defeated Kingston High School last Saturday 9-7.

SCALDING BARREL
STILL EFFICIENT

The old-fashioned, scalding barrel is still efficient for butchering time on the farm if only one hog is to be killed, according to the state college of agriculture, but if more than one is butchered, an iron kettle is better. If several hogs are to be scalded, a fire pit can be dug underneath, and the kettle raised on bricks or railroad iron so that its top is level with the scraping board. Old hands at the game say that the hog should not be killed until the water is ready—heated to 140 or 155 degrees F., with pine tar, wood ashes or lye added to help remove the scurf, if desired—and that the carcass should be put into the tank just as soon as it is dead, with the head and feet kept well under the surface.

Roll the Carcass.

Rolling the carcass in the barrel or tank insures a uniform scald. When the hair slips from the head and feet, the hog is ready to take from the water. These parts are scraped first, and the rest of the body is done as rapidly as possible, with scraping discs, blunt knives, corn knives or hoes.

The carcass is finally hung up to cool, and is then cured by the favorite recipe, some of which have been in New York families for generations. Directions for curing are also available at the college.

"Three Live Ghosts at the Opera House Tonight.

Tonight "Three Live Ghosts" will be the offering. It is another Max March success. The story deals with three soldiers who were reported officially dead, but who escaped from a German prison camp and finally reach London, where the scene of the play is laid. It is a comedy—but through it runs a plot—which is poignant at times. Saturday matinee and night "The Good Little Bad Girl."

Rex Ingram, producer of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," has a worthy successor in "The Conquering Power," at Keeney's again tonight and Saturday. The action is again in France, but this time in a small provincial town, where a story of love and greed is pictured with intense intimacy in an atmosphere of family life. It is the powerful story of Balzac's "Eugenie Grandet." Alice Terry and Rodolph Valentino, who created such memorable successes as the lovers in "The Four Horsemen," are cast in the leading roles. The special musical accompaniment is from the original score rendered by Keeney's augmented orchestra.

Double feature offerings at the Auditorium tonight are Fannie Ward in "A Japanese Nightingale," a story of old Nippon, also Bessie Barriscale in "The Breaking Point," a heart interest story of a romance of yesterday. Saturday a dramatic tale of the underworld, "Broad Daylight," starring Lois Wilson.

Facts Worth Remembering.

When a person feels disposed to over-estimate his own importance, let him remember that mankind got along very well before his birth, and that in all probability they will get along very well after his death.

Imagination.

Imagination exercises a wonderful force upon our health for good or ill. Samuel Rogers, the poet, tells of a man who, resolved on suicide, picked up a dose of poison, but died before he could bring it to his lips. Another man caught a violent chill by imagining himself in a draught from a window leading into a bookcase. A hardy soldier in the trenches swallowed a harmless spider. His mates agreed, as a joke, to tell him that it was a venomous insect, and all pretended that his looks were ghastly and alarming. The joke was carried so far that the soldier, completely believing them, fell into a state of coma and nearly died.

Efforts Not Appreciated.

An English priest, Monsignor Bickstaffe-Drew, has written his recollections of Cardinal Manning. The cardinal was evidently anything but a severe or lugubrious person. Being in Norwich one day during a heavy shower, Manning happened to take shelter in a chemist's shop in company with a very severe-looking lady. Wishing to be agreeable, Manning tried to say something apropos of the occasion or of Norwich and quoted, "The man in the moon came down too soon and lost his way to Norwich. The man in the south has burnt his mouth with eating of cold plum porridge." "I hate a fool," remarked the austere lady.

Automatic Aerial Camera.

A camera, capable of making aerial maps at the rate of 50 square miles per hour, is being utilized in photographing hitherto inaccessible portions of Vancouver Island. The camera is electrically driven and is automatic in its action. Once the motor is started the shutter is wound and fixed at set intervals, new film being moved into place after each exposure. The camera is equipped with a "between-the-lens" shutter which is so designed as to expose the entire section of film in 1-150th of a second and thereby eliminate distortion introduced by focal plane shutters.

Use of Coal in Great Britain.

Just when coal was first used in Great Britain does not seem to be very clear. It was, however, used by early Britons and was to some extent an article of household consumption during the Anglo-Saxon period as early as 825 A. D. There seems to be good reason to believe that Britain was the first European country in which coal was used to any extent. A coal pit at Preston, Haddington, was granted to the monks of Newbattle between 1210 and 1219 A. D., and Henry III. is recorded as having given a license to dig for coal in 1234.

Natural Death of Trees.

In some natural pine forests where the trees grow very close together statistics show that more than 4,000 trees per acre die between the ages of ten and eighty and that only 300 out of the remainder die between the ages of eighty and one hundred. With some natural dying proceeds faster than with others. With pine, birch, aspen and all species which demand a great deal of light, the death rate is enormous. The spruce, beech, fir and, generally speaking, all species which are satisfied with less light, are not affected so seriously.

The North's Call to Trade.

Great Britain has always been to some extent a trading country. Long before the Romans came the Phoenicians (who are the same folk as the Philistines mentioned in the Bible) were sailing from Tyre and Sidon to the coast of Cornwall in order to purchase the tin that was mined there even in those days. Their chariots, their weapons, perhaps even the armor that Goliath wore, were formed from bronze made with Cornish tin.

GREEKS ARREST MORE LEADERS
Flood of Protests May Prevent Additional Executions—Revolutionists Suppress News.
By Telegraph to The Freeman.
London, Dec. 1.—Many rumors, one of them that a reign of terror has developed at Athens, were circulated today following the action of the Greek revolutionary committee in establishing a strict censorship in the Greek capital.
General Plastiras, leader of the Greek revolutionary committee, was said to be dominating the situation. The only news that has come through was an official statement, issued by the Greek committee, stating that General Dousmanis, former chief of staff, and General Valetas had been arrested and that a warrant had been issued for General Papoulas, former commander in chief of the Greeks in Asia Minor. The statement revealed that Prince Andrew, brother of Constantine, is still safe and has not yet been arraigned before a military tribunal. His trial will begin next week, probably on Monday.
King George of Greece, attempted to abdicate the throne when he learned that he could not save the six former state and military officials executed on Tuesday, but was restrained by members of the revolutionary committee. Since then the Athens Palace has been under guard by gendarmes and all persons entering and departing had to show countersigned permits.
In view of the widespread protests throughout Europe, it is possible that the Greek revolutionary committee will be content to impose long prison terms and decrees of banishment upon future prisoners instead of death sentences. However, this belief is not universal. Greek revolutionary officials are deeply enraged not only at the former functionaries of the old Constantine regime, whom they term "traitors guilty of mad acts of treason," but at the attempt of foreign powers to interfere.
Following the action of Premier Mussolini of Italy, in sending a protest to Athens, the Italian government has invited the widows and children of the executed statesmen to take refuge on Italian soil, said a despatch from Rome.
Admiral Smith of the British navy, head of the naval mission at Athens, will leave Greece at once, it was announced by admiralty officials.

"PSYCHIC MARVEL" FOR OPERA HOUSE
Alla Axiom, "marvel of the psychic, wonderful man of mystery and crystal gazer," is coming to the Kingston Opera House next week. This is the same man who had a long and successful run at the Central Theater, New York city. He but recently played for five consecutive months in the leading theaters in Chicago, and has other long engagements to his credit including fifteen weeks in Indianapolis, twelve weeks in Detroit, six weeks in Louisville and extended runs in Boston, Newark, Cleveland, St. Louis and Omaha.
It is said that the occult powers of this wise man are never found at fault; that to him there are no secrets—the past is like an open book and the future like a crystal. The photoplay attraction for Monday will be Bebe Daniels in "Midnight".
Tattooing in Fiji Islands.
It used to be quite common in Fiji and Samoa for a man to bear upon his arm or body a certificate of his birth which was practically indelible.
Tattooing is carried on in these islands to an absurd extent, and it is the practice to tattoo on the hand of a mother the date of her children's births. Sometimes also an enthusiastic father will tattoo the date of the birth on the child itself, and no matter how long it lives, the certificate will remain easily decipherable.
In some adjoining islands every child is tattooed almost from need to foot upon its completing its twelfth year. The result is very remarkable, especially if the child is growing rapidly, so that the spaces between the tattoo marks increase in size year by year.
How New York Got Its Spine.
The steel that made New York a city in the sky was wrought in my own time. My father and his sons helped puddle the iron that has braced this city's rising towers. A town that crawled, now stands erect. And we whose backs were bent above the puddling hearths know how it got its spine. A mossy town of wood and stone changed in my generation to a towering city of glass and steel. "All of which"—I can say in the words of the poet—"I saw and part of which I was."—From "The Iron Puddler," by James J. Davis.

Why Acadian French Were Removed.
A few days ago a chapel, a memorial to the French settlers of Acadia who were expelled from the land of Evangeline by the British in 1755, was dedicated at Grand Pre, N. S.
In 1621 Acadia was granted to Sir William Alexander, who named it Nova Scotia. In 1755, because of their persistent refusal to take the British oaths of allegiance, the Acadian French were removed.
Evangeline, a tale of Acadia is said to be based upon a true story, which traveled from Canada to New England by word of mouth, and is the subject of a famous poem by Longfellow, published in 1847. It is the story of two innocent lovers who were banished from Acadia with the rest of the French and became separated, but who remained faithful till death. The poem founded a national legend which has kept alive the memory of an episode that would have otherwise been forgotten.
How Chinese Regard Girl Babies.
Of so little account are women considered in many parts of China that a father, if asked the number of his children, will probably leave out the girls in his reckoning.
Best of All Endeavors.
To secure and promote the feeling of cheerfulness should be the supreme aim of all our endeavors after happiness.—Schopenhauer

Have We Left France "In the Lurch"?

After the Armistice did America forget the high resolves and purposes with which we entered the World War? Did we leave our Allies, especially France "in the lurch"? In consequence of our attitude, is Germany in alliance with Russia and Turkey, confidentially preparing for a new attack upon France and the "Peace of the World"? The recent speeches by Mr. Clemenceau in this country confront us with these disturbing questions. "In the Armistice, in the Treaty and all that followed, there was a great share of pure American work," he reminded his hearers in New York. But "you left after the contract was finished, and you told us to execute it as we might. And you were wrong in that. You broke all the organs of economic solidarity. If we had known that for three years the thing that was guaranteed to us (reparations) was not coming to us, we would have gone to Berlin," he declared.

The leading article in The Literary Digest this week presents the reaction of the American press to the appeals and charges made by the "Tiger of France," Georges Clemenceau. Newspapers of varied political persuasion are included in the many quoted in the article, and all sections of the country are represented. A reading of this summary will give one a very clear idea of exactly what the French nation would have America do and the feeling in this country as to what we should do toward putting the world upon a peace basis.

Overdose of Sun.
A little sun is a great tonic to the body, but an overdose is dangerous. Prolonged exposure to the sun's rays is liable to result in blotchy skin and painful eruptions which are difficult to get rid of and sometimes impossible. Mixed with the strong sunlight are rays known as actinic rays, which have a very serious effect on exposed skin. The rays actually destroy the tissues and then follow what many of us know too well, painful soreness and burning. Sometimes this leaves the skin permanently disfigured in brown patches. Application of boric acid is excellent for the burned condition, but if the burns are serious it is advisable to consult a doctor.
Odd Anniversary Custom.
Under date of January 6, 1891, Pepps in his diary tells of a curious custom in use at the anniversaries of marriages. "To dinner to Sir W. Pepps," says Pepps, "it being a solemn feast day with him, his wedding day, and we had, besides a good chine of beef and other good cheer, 18 mince pies in a dish, the number of years that he hath been married." And about a month later in the diary is recorded: "I dined with Sir W. Batten with many friends more, it being his wedding day, and among other frolics, it being their third year, they had three pies."

LOYD GEORGE IN SECRET PACT

K. H. S. SECONDS DEFEATED, 26-0

The British General Staff to Aid Greece Against Turkey, Says Athens Dispatch Which Former Premier Doesn't Deny.

Revelation to The Freeman. Paris, Dec. 1.—Revelations that former Premier Lloyd-George, of England, and former Premier Eleutherios Venizelos, of Greece, entered into a secret diplomatic agreement in 1920 by which Great Britain promised to support Greece in the war against Turkey, were contained in an Athens dispatch received by the Matin today.

According to the Athens correspondent of the Matin, "there is evidence that the Greeks undertook their military adventure in Asia Minor at the suggestion of British, the Anglo-Greek Near East partnership promising the Greeks financial assistance to carry on the struggle."

Greece, it was further stated, was promised equal shares in the subsequent division of Turkey. The cost of carrying on the war was to be imposed upon Turkey in the peace settlement.

The Matin printed what purported to be the secret diplomatic reports of M. Venizelos while the negotiations with the British were in progress. These contain a letter from Venizelos, dated June 19, 1920, in which the former premier reported that the British general staff council had technically advised the Greeks.

Communications from Venizelos about the same time warned the Greek government that it could not expect any assistance from France and Italy and that the Greeks should be on the alert against invasion by bands of Bulgarian irregulars over the Thracian frontier.

The British, according to the Matin's revelations, agreed to protect Constantinople and the Turkish straits. Venizelos insisted that the Ottoman Empire be completely partitioned leaving only the Anatolian plateau under Turkish sovereignty.

While the Turco-Greek war was in progress, said the Matin dispatch, the British began to consider the possibility of lightening the original burden imposed upon Turkey. Venizelos successfully interfered at this point, demanding the maintenance of the original Turkish condition, and promising that Greece would force Turkey to accept the terms of peace and to demobilize the nationalist army.

London, Dec. 1.—Documents released today by the Paris Matin reveal that the former Lloyd-George government supported Eleutherios Venizelos ex-premier of Greece, in the Greek war against Turkey and actually promised assistance to Greece, caused a sensation here although it has been an open secret that Britain aided the Greeks while the French assisted the Turks.

The matter will be taken up officially in the House of Commons on Monday when Premier Andrew Bonar Law will be asked if there is any documentary evidence on record here to show that the British minister at Athens gave the Greeks active support in their military campaign in Asia Minor.

Former Premier David Lloyd-George, who was said to have entered into secret diplomatic negotiations with Venizelos, refused to discuss the Matin statements.

On account of Amanda Jones. She was the perfect woman. Amanda Jones measured well, never mind how much, or where. She had been measured in comparison with the Venus of Milo, the Venus of Medici, and the Venus-nobody could pronounce that name. She was perfect. She had no flaws.

Amanda Jones, the perfect woman. Aged twenty-two. Home, Green Point, New York. Occupation, college student, preparing for marriage.

Horace Chapin had been discovered a little while before. He was the perfect man. He measured 55 inches around the biceps, 36 around the triceps, 12 feet around either calf, and had a chest expansion of 5.074 yards. Nothing like him had been seen before.

Wherefore the future? Because these young people were going to get married and become the progenitors of a congenial race. They were to become the perfect parents.

Little Miss Deadman, the professor's spinster sister of thirty-four, she said, had bestowed them into matrimony. Miss Deadman measured—Miss Deadman was thin, wiry, and had a red, turned-up nose. Miss Deadman wore a comic and scientific articles for those magazines that make you shudder with fear when you see them in the libraries.

Horace Chapin and Amanda Jones were, in a way, and very gently, on exhibition. Not to the vulgar public, of course. They gave performances in the Smithfield college gymnasium.

Horace could raise a ton weight with either hand, and balance himself on his front teeth. He could leap five inches into the air. He ate 27,000 calories a day. He and Amanda made a splendid pair. One shudders to think what a marital scrap would look like.

They were engaged. They were to be endowed with a model cottage. Their food was to be weighed out to them by calories every day for the rest of their lives. They were to be married in the gymnasium at 7 p. m. in the presence of the governor of the state.

They were, of course, in love with each other. Such a model couple!

It is true that sometimes Horace thought he saw a shade of sadness mantle the perfectly oval face of Amanda Jones. It worried him a little. He couldn't press her to his bosom, or crush her in his arms, because he was so strong, but he looked sympathetic.

Sometimes Amanda Jones wondered what it was that set Horace's spectacular muscles like iron cords, but she was too discreet to ask any questions.

The marriage stage. The canopy. Delegations from all the leading eugenetic societies in the country. The governor. Rosen. Ice cream. A band running up that dear old piece from

"Lohengrin."

Amanda Jones, pale as death, tottered in on Professor Deadman's arm. Why did the bride look so distressed? Nobody knew. The band had started, and, anyway, they'd soon be tied up.

But where was Horace Chapin? Where was Miss Deadman, who was in charge of the proceedings? The band, aghast at the bride's appearance before the groom, had wilted away into a few discords. There was something electric in the air.

"Poor little thing! I'd give him a piece of my mind, if I was her."

The bride was bearing up under the awful suspense of not knowing whether the bridegroom was coming or not. But she looked ready to faint, and then—good night to the wedding platform. Strong man, casting anxious glances at her, ran for pulleys and ropes.

The awful news was bruited everywhere. Horace Chapin and Miss Deadman had eloped. They had been married that afternoon by special license, and were now on their wedding journey to Niagara Falls.

Amanda Jones leaned heavily against Professor Deadman, who leaned heavily against an iron post. He mopped his brow.

"Poor thing! Look, she's falling!"

Silently, like a tall lily, the bride swayed into Professor Deadman's arms. Professor Deadman braced himself against the stanchion to sustain the burden.

The bride turned her ripe, red lips up to the professor's. Silently they kissed.

Prof. Amos Deadman, tall, lean, spectacled, erudite—also fifty—had leaped into universal fame after serving thirty years as an unknown recluse at Smithfield college. Why?

SHORTAGE OF COUNTRY DOCTORS

Medical School Graduates Flock to Cities, Where They Say They Can More Easily Get Back What Their Education Has Cost.

By The-Gray in The Freeman.

Albany, Dec. 1.—One of the many perplexing problems which the New York state health department has been called upon to help solve is:

What can be done to relieve the shortage of doctors in many rural communities throughout the state?

According to officials of the state health department there are between 20 and 25 small localities in the state where there is a shortage of physicians. While the present situation is not as bad as it has been at various times in the past, it still presents a problem which the state health officials have not been able to solve.

The young men who are being graduated from the various medical institutions throughout the state, at least a great majority of them, refuse to settle down and practice in small communities. They all want to start in the city because they are under the impression whether rightly or not, that the city holds a better opportunity for them.

State health officials who have put the question up to a number of young doctors who have opened offices in the cities say the answer of the youthful physicians is that they could not "make it pay" in the country. According to the younger generation of doctors their college education costs so much that it would take them years to get it back on the fees received by the country doctors.

Times was when all the education a young fellow who wanted to become a doctor had to have was a high school education, but now virtually all of the medical colleges in the state require two or three years of college education before the young man or woman can enter the medical institution.

"It's hard to tell what will happen in 25 years if all the young doctors refuse to open offices in the country and keep on coming to the cities," said one official of the state health department. "Of course we realize that a young fellow who is just starting out on a medical career wants to earn as much money as possible when he opens an office, but someone has got to doctor the people in the rural communities. Perhaps it's a lucky thing that people in the rural section, on the whole, have better health than the city folks."

These conditions reached an acute stage in 1918 so that the state health department became sort of an employment agency, acting as a go-between for communities that were without doctors and members of the medical profession. At that time there were about 80 communities in the state which were without any medical service or with service so inadequate as to cause an appeal for help to the state health officials.

will be received, cared for, and returned promptly by the poultry department. The department will help the exhibitors in every way, and will supply information on how to select and prepare poultry and eggs for exhibition.

The show is intended to demonstrate the comparative quality of poultry and the like, to train poultrymen in judging poultry and eggs, and to help in the distribution of production-bred poultry and high quality eggs through an auction sale. Incidentally, the show will bring together the most progressive poultrymen of the state and help in promoting business and educational organization.

The county agricultural agents and the poultry department of the state college at Ithaca will furnish detailed information on request.

MORE GOOD THINGS

When serving boiled fish, cook it in a steamer or dropped in water tied in a cheese cloth. Remove, drain, bone and skin the fish, divide into fillets and serve with fingers.

Fingering.—Take the juice of half a lemon, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one tablespoonful of finely-minced onion, two tablespoonfuls of minced parsley, one teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of mustard, one-half teaspoonful of paprika, half a clove of garlic, the yolk of an egg and three tablespoonfuls of water. Put the butter, lemon juice and seasoning into a saucepan and bring to a boil, add the yolk of the egg and water but do not boil; stir until well blended and thick and remove from the heat. Serve at once.

Braised Sweetbreads.—Wash the sweetbreads using one-half pound, cover with cold water and add the juice of half a lemon. Let stand for two hours, then simmer in hot water for twenty minutes, cool and press under a weight to flatten. Remove the tubes and cut in slices. Place two tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan add the sweetbreads and one tablespoonful of chopped onion, one cupful of mushrooms, and when well-heated arrange on squares of buttered toast and cover with Supreme Sauce.—Take one cupful of cream sauce, the juice of one lemon, one well-beaten egg, one teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of paprika, one teaspoonful of onion juice, pinch of powdered cloves, the same of nutmeg. Heat until very hot and pour over the sweetbreads and toast. Garnish with finely-minced parsley and sliced hard-cooked egg.

Pumpkin Pudding.—Take one and one-half cupfuls of well-cooked pumpkin, add one cupful of milk, the yolk of two eggs, a third of a cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of melted butter, a teaspoonful of ginger, a few drops of lemon extract and a little salt. Mix well, pour into custard cups and bake for an hour in a slow oven. Set the cups in a pan of hot water. Garnish with whipped cream and grated cheese. This pudding is better for children than the old-fashioned pumpkin pie.

How thrilling it was! I saw some golden plovers on their way to Alaska. How they did travel, how wonderful they looked.

For they had come such a distance, and I know it is that the birds can fly and never lose their way, but I was such a perfect course for them, and I follow it, it is something at which I always marvel.

Then, too, they know where there are islands of safety. They seem to go on such round-about distances, too, and yet they know just where they're going and they go there.

But in addition to the golden plovers and some other plovers, flying about night and during the daytime I saw

"Yes," the Wishing Fairy continued, "I saw a nest, and in it were the eggs of Mrs. Milford Duck."

"So, you see, the birds and the wild do know they are being protected, and for they feel it is safe to lay the little eggs in the nest, which will hatch out into ducklings."

"Oh, it is a fine thing, but it is also a right thing to protect the birds who are so marvellously and so fearlessly brave, and so adventurously, and show them that we're their friends."

"I think so, too, Wishing Fairy," and all the Fairies shouted: "We think so, too, and we're so happy that this has come about, so happy indeed."

TROY TEAM ALSO LOSES TO LOCALS

Morgenweck Clan Gets Turkey Over Holiday—Nick Harvey Makes Firm Appearance Here and Displays Wonderful Work, Borgein Again Outstanding Star in Basket Shooting.

Before the largest crowd of the season the local league leaders beat the Troy quintet Thanksgiving evening in the fastest game of the season by a 28 to 13 tally. Eighteen hundred fans witnessed a struggle that was swift from start to finish.

Nick Harvey played for the first time this season on the home court and his work was so thorough, that Boyle, one of the high scorers of the league, was unable to cage a field basket. During the last five minutes of playing C. Husta replaced Borgein in front and Knoblauch took the center position in place of C. Powers. Borgein was as usual the high scorer, caging as many as the entire Collar City tribe. C. Powers again showed his worth getting an even break at center with elongated Lopchick. Evers was the best point getter for the upstarts, making two fields and a foul. Referee Meehan was again in charge and had his mouth organ working during the entire game. Out of twenty-two tries from the free gift line the local representatives caged ten and out of twenty-four the Troy team made good but seven. Foul shooting on the local court has been very poor this season from the number of fouls called during the contest; a foul shooting team would have a big margin.

Borgein started the scoring for the local squad and they kept up the pace and were never headed. Troy made three fields during this period from long range. Kingston walked off the floor at half time with a six point lead. Score 16 to 10.

Artus started the scoring during the second half making good from the complimentary line. Troy was unable to cage a field basket during this period. Holding a team for a period without a field basket is another record for the local basketball bouncers. When the final bell sounded Kingston was in front of a 28 to 13 score. From the unevenness of the score the game might be thought of as one sided, but it wasn't. Troy was in the game every minute. The excellent pass work by the local players accounted for everything. With Artus and Harvey at the guard positions, a team has to be lightning fast to break through for a basket.

Following the game many stayed for the dancing to the strains of Balfe's orchestra.
